

"FOR DISTINGUISHED SERVICE"—The Distinguished Service Medal, which comes few and far between in the Army, was pinned on the chest of Colonel John S. Bragdon (right), chief engineer of the South Atlantic division, yesterday by Major General William Bryden in ceremonies held at Fort McPherson. The colonel was honored for an exceptional building record.

Bragdon Gets Red Cross Award at Nazi Slaughter Colorful Rites

By FRANK DRAKE.

Almost on the same spot where he started out on his Army engineering career 25 years ago, Colonel John S. Bragdon, chief of the engineering division of the South Atlantic states, yesterday stood at attention on Fort McPherson's parade ground, and a gallery of civilians and Army officers applauded from the sidelines.

The ceremony, honoring the outstanding building record achieved by Colonel Bragdon since May, 1941, in the development of Army camps in the south, was coupled with the regular formal parade of the fort in the late afternoon. The parade was reviewed by General Bryden, Colonel Bragdon, Colonel Clifford C. Early, post commander; Lieutenant Colonel Preston B. Mayson, the general's aide, and Major W. F. Catron, post executive officer.

Colonel Bragdon received the congratulations of officers and spectators (including L. W. (Chip) Robert and his wife, Evie), for

U. S., BRITISH AIRMEN BLAST SHATTERED ROMMEL LEGIONS

'Complete' Victory Near, Commander Tells Allied Troops

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

CAIRO, Nov. 5.—The broken and bleeding Axis desert army fled across the sands of western Egypt tonight in a desperate attempt to escape apparently certain annihilation at the hands of triumphant Allied forces whose British commander declared: "Complete victory is almost in sight!"

Over a 40-mile front littered with hundreds of wrecked enemy tanks, planes and gunposts, the British Eighth Army and its homeless Allies—fighting Frenchmen, Greeks and Poles—drove relentlessly forward on the heels of Marshal Erwin Rommel's exhausted columns withdrawing hastily toward Fuka, 62 miles west of the shattered Alamein line.

United States and RAF airmen streaking overhead steadily moved their "bombline" ahead of the advancing Allied infantry and tanks. By day and night they hacked at the remnants of the Axis desert legions who were so certain of victory last summer that Premier Mussolini, of Italy, made hurried plans for a triumphant personal appearance in Cairo.

'Keep Up Pressure.'

The Allied formations themselves had fought 13 grueling days, but with victory so nearly in their grasp Lieutenant General Bernard L. Montgomery spurred them on with this new order of the day:

"I call on all troops to keep up the pressure and not to relax for a single moment. We have a chance to put the whole panzer army in the bag and we will do so. I congratulate all troops on what has been achieved. Complete victory is almost in sight."

Front dispatches said the retreating Axis armored detachments—or what is left of them—were short of fuel, thanks to the steady rear line battering of their supply depots by American and Allied airmen.

(A Reuters dispatch said not a single Axis tank had been able to cross the Mediterranean in the last six weeks.)

Nazis Lead Flight.

There were also accumulating signs that the German African corps, the backbone of the Axis invasion, was outstepping its Italian counterpart in the flight. The advancing British discovered that Axis rear guards were mostly Italian. Rommel, these dispatches indicated, clearly was trying to save his own tattered formations and leaving the Italians to fend for themselves in a "jackrabbit war" where most commanders appeared to be left on their own because of demoralized communications and leadership.

The British announced yesterday that General von Stumme, second in command to Rommel, had been killed, and that General Ritter von Thoma, third of the topflight Axis leaders, was in captivity.

The tidal wave across the desert was irregular, most of the speed being made along the Mediterranean coastal road. Far to the south, near the edge of the Qattara Depression, isolated enemy groups were being mopped up with little trouble, dispatches said. There was also a steady eastward trickle of Axis prisoners which already has passed the 9,000 mark.

Three days ago the Italians were reported to have asked for a truce to bury their dead. The advancing British ignored this

London Joyous As Axis Loses Desert Control

By ROBERT BUNNELLE.

LONDON, Nov. 5.—(AP)—The Axis Army in Egypt "is busted and virtually helpless" and is being subjected to the grimmest kind of slaughter in a narrow trap along the Mediterranean coast, a high British official said late today.

The informant, who cannot be identified by name and who usually has been extremely reserved, said the fate of Marshal Rommel's forces would finally be sealed soon and that the British Army, Navy and Air Force were engaged in what amounts to a mop-up process.

Exultation in London.

"It is impossible to be too optimistic," he said.

The official estimate came but a short time after the Allied elder statesman and premier of South Africa, Marshal Jan Christiaan Smuts, had suggested strongly that the triumph in Egypt was "the turning point of the war."

Sir Stafford Cripps, lord privy seal, declared the North African battle was but one of the new offensives the Allies would mount against the Axis. Exiled governments in London exulted in the prediction that the desert smash was preliminary to an invasion of Europe itself.

The official who declared Rommel "busted" said the Allies were "hunting the Germans and Italians like rabbits" with every weapon at their command.

Only a Prelude.

"We're giving the herrenvolk in uniform a taste of what they gave the civilian population of France and we intend to keep on giving it to them," he said. "This is only a prelude to what the Germans and their Italian lackeys can expect in the next few months."

"We have captured a hell of a lot of prisoners," he added, "and will take more."

He said the merciless slashing of the Axis forces was at once an answer to those who said Britain couldn't fight on land and to those who said British and American equipment was inferior. He said the Allied intention was to turn desert tracks into streets of death.

Besides the United States and British Air Forces, and the British land troops now engaged, the official said, some of Britain's finest regiments are waiting in reserve for their turn. He said the Germans were believed to have their main supplies in the forward lines and that they would find it impossible to escape this time.

"We've got Rommel where we want him."

The British from King George VI to the lowliest cockney in Piccadilly Circus exulted in the growing defeat of the Axis desert

Japs' Pincer In Guadalcanal Perils Yanks

WASHINGTON, Nov. 5.—(AP)—

Violent fighting flamed in a new sector of battle-ravaged Guadalcanal tonight as American troops, already heavily and successfully engaged on their western flank, sought to crush the eastern arm of a Japanese pincer move before it could be fearfully strengthened.

The extent of American successes to the west was shown in a Navy communiqué announcing this latest development. The communiqué said that in the western sector 350 Japanese were killed on November 3 and three enemy field pieces, a dozen 37 mm. light artillery guns and 30 machineguns were captured.

Meanwhile both Naval ships and Army aircraft had struck new blows against the enemy's western threat to the strategic American airfield on the Solomon island, bombing and shelling supply dumps and troop concentrations on the north coast of Guadalcanal in the vicinity of Kokumbona.

The airfield is the focal point of all operations on Guadalcanal island, both American and Japanese, and the directions east and west are determined from it as center.

In an obvious effort to divert some American strength from their main forces to the west, the Japanese threw a force of troops onto the island east of the airfield on the night of November 2-3. The Marines had started their counteroffensive to the west against the enemy's jungle-protected troops November 1 and had gained two miles in the initial actions.

Today's communiqué said that on the night of November 3-4, the Japs again effected landings to the east, in the vicinity of Kokumbona, about six miles from the airfield. Apparently it was about the time these latest landing operations were being completed that Marine units of the Army-Marine forces defending the field made their assault in the east.

HIGH NAZIS DESERT DRIVE VICTIMS—General Ritter von Thoma, left, commander of the Afrika Korps, was reported by the British to be among the 9,000 Axis prisoners taken when Marshal Rommel's desert forces were routed. General Georg von Stumme, right, second in command to Rommel, was killed in action.

Draft-Exempt Men Urged To Aid War Work

WASHINGTON, Nov. 5.—(AP)—

The selective service system is seeking to induce large numbers of men with dependents to shift from non-essential work to war-supporting occupations by offering them the prospect of longer deferment from the draft.

Officials at headquarters here said they had laid down the policy that men in Class 3-A (deferred because of dependents) who engage in an activity supporting the war effort should be transferred to 3-B (deferred because of the nature of their work), whether or not their particular jobs are listed as "essential" in their line of work.

Such men would thus have a double-deferment status. However, officials emphasized this would not assure deferment for any specific length of time, such as the six-month period covered by the classification of a single man as necessary in essential work, but only until classes with lesser deferment claims are exhausted.

This illustration of the operation of the double-deferment policy was given by officials:

A childless married man working as a barber could shift to an aircraft factory and get reclassification from 3-A to 3-B, even though his work consisted only of sweeping the factory floor or running the elevator.

This would defer him beyond the call of other married but childless barbers but would not postpone his induction beyond the call of other men in the aircraft plant who did work that was necessary to keep up the plant's production.

Likewise, all 3-A men in or entering farming, newspaper work and other occupations in the critical list should be reclassified to 3-B until it becomes necessary to make inductions from the ranks of persons in similar status; when the questions of the essentiality of their work or the number of their dependents would be considered.

The officials said the double-deferment policy, despite the major limitations on the extent of additional deferment provided, already was scoring noteworthy success in persuading married men to shift to war-connected work.

Mass Book Buying Idea Is 'Forgotten'

By LAMAR Q. BALL.

Two days of secret discussion over the investment of Georgia's tax money in public schoolbooks ended yesterday with no official announcement from the State Board of Education, other than these admissions by Dr. M. D. Collins, state superintendent of education:

1. The mass purchase of books, as originally threatened by Governor Talmadge shortly after his defeat at the polls, has not been urged at these meetings.

"I believe that idea has been forgotten," said Dr. Collins, who opposed the move as a deplorable waste of state money.

Contracts Renewed.

2. Contracts were renewed for approximately 80 per cent of the books now used in state schools and these contracts call for delivery at prices existing in 1937 when the last contracts were signed.

3. New books, recommended by the Professional Textbook Readers, will be considered at a meeting of the board next Thursday.

4. A new contract, omitting the former 90-day cancellation clause, has not been adopted and all contracts are being made on the cancellation terms of the old contracts.

5. Between now and next Thursday, a subcommittee will consider the hundreds of new books recommended by the professional readers.

6. Contracts covering workbook material for the schools were not included in the advertisement for bids of a month ago did not include this type of material.

Nothing could be learned of what form of discussions resulted in these actions. As on the first day of the meeting, the board voted itself into executive session early yesterday morning and discussed the expenditure of $4,000,000 of public moneys in star chamber.

George Offers Bill To Widen F.D.R.'s Power

Measure Arms President With Authority To Adjust Tariffs.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 5.—(AP)—An administration bill to arm President Roosevelt with authority to adjust tariffs and trade agreements for the duration of the war was offered in the senate today by Chairman George, Democrat, Georgia, of its finance committee.

In line with a presidential message Monday it would allow the President to suspend tariffs, import duties and other restrictions against a free flow of "persons, property and information" between this country and its allies.

Republican Leader McNary, of Oregon, asserted the President "wanted authority to tear down tariff barriers," and the proposal would strike "at the heart" of the average American, "used to high standards of living."

George emphasized he introduced the bill "by request" and for finance committee study, saying it would have to originate in the house because it involved tax questions.

Russia Gets Greeting

From Mrs. Roosevelt
MOSCOW, Nov. 5.—(AP)—The Moscow radio said tonight that Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt had sent this message of greeting to the U. S. S. R. on the occasion of its 25th anniversary November 7: "Everyone is watching the heroic Russian defense with deep admiration, and hopes that the valiant armies there will be successful and that eventually the forces of all the United Nations will crush their common enemy."

Others sending greetings included Donald Nelson and Walt Disney, the radio announced.

RAF Pressed Daylight Raids During October

British Airmen Over Europe 11 Nights, 21 Days in Month.

LONDON, Nov. 5.—(AP)—The Air Ministry said today the RAF had been on offensive operations over Europe 11 nights and 21 days during October. Bombers were over Germany seven nights and one day and over northern Italy three nights and one day.

Throughout most of the month weather conditions were unfavorable for raids over Germany, but advantage was taken of cloud conditions to press home daylight attacks, the ministry said.

Enemy aircraft were reported over Britain four nights and 21 days during the month, but none penetrated far inland.

RAF operations in the Middle East during October cost the British 129 aircraft, compared with a loss of 286 inflicted on the Axis, the ministry said.

Referring to the attempted raids on Malta on October 11 and 12, it said the German and Italian Air Force "received their greatest thrashing, 38 enemy aircraft being destroyed against a loss of six of our aircraft."

The report said the RAF lost 110 planes over the continent during October and three over Britain, while 35 enemy planes were destroyed.

Interned Americans
To Go to Germany
STOCKHOLM, Nov. 5.—(AP)—American citizens arrested in Norway have been interned in a camp near Oslo, but soon will be sent to Germany, reliable reports reaching here said tonight.

The Americans, mostly of Norwegian descent, were believed to number several hundred.

Arrest of Americans in Norway was first reported October 18.

Many Valdosta Boys
To Make Model Planes

VALDOSTA, Ga., Nov. 5.—Plans have been completed for carrying out Valdosta's part of the naval program of building model planes for use in the national war effort. The Valdosta Service League is sponsoring the work here and all schoolboys who desire to engage in making models will use the Community Center.

The work started today with Herbert Kraft, young Valdostan, who volunteered as an instructor. Mrs. T. C. Ashley, representing the service league, will supervise the model work at the Community Center and it is expected that quite a number of school boys will enlist in the work.

Republican Prepares Speech Conceding Defeat; Wins Race

OMAHA, Nov. 5.—(AP)—The Republican landslide in Tuesday's election not only swept Representative Charles McLaughlin, Democrat, Nebraska, to defeat but swept Howard Buffett, his successful Republican opponent, off his feet.

Representative-elect Buffett, a young Omaha securities dealer, fumbled in his pocket for pencil and paper when asked for a statement, and admitted: "All I fixed up was one conceding my defeat."

Many Changes Seen In House Groups as Result of Election

WASHINGTON, Nov. 5.—(AP)—Sweeping changes in the membership of major house committees, and new chairmanships for numerous minor committees, will result from Democratic casualties in Tuesday's elections.

While the Democrats will retain all the chairmanships and at least nominal voting control of all the committees, they may be confronted next January by Republican demands for larger representation on some of the more important groups. Influential house Republicans said they expected a more proportionate distribution of places on such major committees as ways and means, rules, appropriations and banking and currency, on all of which except rules they now have only 40 per cent of the seats. Less than one-third of the rules committee members are Republicans.

Some Democrats believed the majority leadership would yield to Republican pressure and voluntarily give the minority more committee assignments for the sake of harmony and to avert a fight at the outset of the new session.

There were others, though, who contended there was no precedent—even back in the days of Republican house control—for departure from the traditional 60-40 distribution of committee assignments.

As a result of Tuesday's balloting, primary defeats and vacancies, ways and means committee has seven Democrats and two Republicans; either directly out or on the way out; appropriations, eight Democrats; agriculture and labor committees, three Democrats each; and military affairs, five Democrats.

Banking and currency lost its ranking Democratic member, Williams, of Missouri, a general election casualty, while the committee on un-American activities will start off the new year without two present members, Casey of Massachusetts, and Beam of Illinois. Casey unsuccessfully sought a senate seat, and Beam did not run for re-election.

Amendment-Free Draft Urged by Yale Head
NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 5.—President Charles Seymour, of Yale, in a special press interview of his five years as president, today urged that congress pass the 18-19 draft bill quickly and without the amendment requiring a year's training before combat.

"The armed forces must be left with free hands to deal with the man power put at their disposal," he declared, and explained that in his opinion, keeping all the boys for training a year would prevent picking out the most promising for higher training at universities. Only thus can they avoid the mistakes of the last war; only thus can they utilize their material to the best advantage. Only if their hands are free can they develop the use of university educational resources for training forces."

Vitamin Pills, Orange Roadster Figure in Errol Flynn's Case

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 5.—(AP)—Vitamin pills, the name of Pat Di Cicco and Errol Flynn's orange colored convertible roadster, figured today in testimony at Flynn's preliminary hearing on three counts of statutory assault against two teen-agers.

One of his accusers was Peggy La Rue Satterlee, actress and Hollywood showgirl who described on cross-examination her two-week acquaintance with Flynn before a weekend yacht trip in August, 1941, during which she charges she was twice assaulted. She was 15 at the time.

A telephone introduction in mid-July led, she testified, to a Sunday cruise on the yacht three days later. She was with her sister, Mickey June Satterlee, also an entertainer, "and a lot of other people."

At Night Club. They met again at a night club, "eggy" continued. She and her sister left the party, she added, and went to an apartment with Di Cicco, man-about-Hollywood, and now husband of Heiress Gloria Vanderbilt, and Johnny Myers, a movie publicist.

A few nights later, the girl testified, she met Flynn somewhere—she couldn't remember where—and that night he drove her home in his orange convertible. He left her at the door of her apartment house, she testified. Flynn's attorney, Jerry Giesler, asked whether she or her sister signed the lease on the apartment. Miss Satterlee said neither did—that it was signed by a friend, whom she did not identify.

"Who lived in the apartment besides you and your sister and sometimes your mother?" queried Giesler.

"No one," the girl replied, emphatically.

Next Meeting. She next met Flynn, she continued, on the night of August 1. Buster Wiles, a movie stunt man, picked her up at the apartment and drove her to an expensive restaurant. Flynn was there and the three had dinner. Then they drove to Flynn's physician. All three went to his office.

"Flynn got some vitamin B, or something," she said.

"Because I got a girl at a drive-in cafe," Peggy said she wouldn't remember her name, but estimated her age at about 22—then all four drove to Flynn's yacht.

She had her first drink of liquor after they reached Catalina island, she testified. They all went to a bar, and:

"I had a coke with rum in it." "Why did you order that?" Giesler asked.

"Because Mr. Flynn always drank that." "Did you ever drink before?" "I never drank before. I did have wine with dinner occasionally, however."

Glass of Milk. She said later she ordered a glass of milk and left the table, returning to find it spiked with rum. "I asked who did it," she declared, "and Mr. Flynn said 'I did.' I asked him why and he said 'Because it's good for you before going to bed.' I didn't feel any effects from these two drinks. I was not intoxicated."

On direct examination previously, Miss Satterlee had testified that Flynn entered her stateroom after they went aboard and "said he wanted to get in bed with me and talk." She was assaulted, she asserted, that night as well as on the return trip from Catalina island.

Under California law, statutory assault involves any sexual act with a girl under 18, with or without consent.

The third count against Flynn was preferred by Betty Hansen, 17, of Lincoln, Neb. She testified earlier that Flynn had assaulted her in the bedroom of a Hollywood mansion during a party late in September.

"AT THE END OF THE ROAD"—Veteran Senator George W. Norris, Independent, Nebraska, returned to Washington Wednesday from a fruitless campaign trip home, read election returns which brought defeat, and stood outside the senate office building, looking over the capitol grounds. Winder Meets Returning Hero, Damon Gause, at City Limits

Special to THE CONSTITUTION.
WINDER, Ga., Nov. 5.—This northeast Georgia town, resplendent in flags and patriotic decorations, today welcomed home its most famous wartime son—Captain Damon J. Gause, who made a historic 159-day journey from Bataan and Corregidor to Australia.

A motorcade including Senator Richard Russell, Mayor H. T. Flanagan, Captain H. L. Woodward of the Home Guard; Boy Scouts, the American Legion and its auxiliary and hundreds of excited citizens met the returning hero at the city limits. With him was his sister, Audrey Gause, a student nurse at an Atlanta hospital.

Captain Gause immediately went to the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Duff A. Gause, near here. He will be formally welcomed home at a meeting at 8:30 o'clock tomorrow night at the high school athletic field.

The log which they kept during the entire trip ended with this notation: "We close this log with much relief and rejoicing."

Travels Acclaimed.
The travels of Captain Gause and Captain William Lloyd Osborne, of Los Angeles, through Japanese territory to the sea and in a 22-foot boat to Australia, was acclaimed in a news release from General MacArthur's headquarters three weeks ago.

The Georgian, an airman assigned temporarily with ground troops during the battle of Bataan, was en route to the front lines when the peninsula fell. He avoided a Japanese armored truck by diving into a river bed and that night picked his way through Jap troops sleeping feet to feet on mats along the river.

Captain Gause swam along the coast until he thought he had cleared the Japanese post and then waded ashore only to be captured. He made a break for freedom and succeeded in reaching a boat anchored off shore amid a hail of rifle bullets.

40 Bullet Holes. Exhausted, he slept for a short time, and then started out in a rowboat tied alongside the larger craft. The Japanese blazed away with machineguns, and Captain Gause counted 40 bullet holes in the boat when he reached Australia.

With the fall of Corregidor, he headed for the Luzon mainland by night in a native boat. A sudden storm upset the boat, but he managed to hang on until daylight and then swam ashore.

In Luzon, Captain Gause heard of another American who wanted to try to reach Australia. He arranged to meet him.

Edward Haight, 17, Convicted of Murder
WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Nov. 5.—(AP)—Edward Haight, 17, was convicted of first-degree murder tonight in the double slaying of two little Bedford village sisters last September 14.

A jury of six men and six women found him guilty after deliberating one hour and 36 minutes. The verdict carried a mandatory death sentence.

Haight heard the verdict with a smile and was led away after Judge Frank H. Coyne set next Tuesday for sentencing.

Congress Gets Swifter Travel Plan for Future

Transportation Ideas Streamlined for Post-War America.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 5.—(AP)—A streamlined transportation plan for post-war America was laid before congress today for future consideration.

Involving intricate highways and airways for swifter, cheaper and better methods of getting from here to there, the system was recommended by a special committee of research experts, headed by Industrialist Owen D. Young and working under the sponsorship of the National Resources Board.

It was passed on to congress by President Roosevelt without comment.

Besides envisioning streamlined autos of the future and thousands of commercial airplanes, the committee said the plan would provide post-war jobs for former fighting men and war workers.

Plenty of parking space in spots not conflicting with traffic were stressed in the blue print.

To accomplish the purpose, the committee suggested that all federal agencies dealing with transportation be merged into a "national transportation agency," which could deal directly with state and local governments in laying out transcontinental lines.

It also suggested organizing employers and employees of the entire transportation system into a nation-wide group to settle wage, service and benefit questions.

Expenditure of both public and private money would be required, the committee said, with the former type of funds especially needed in the case of railroads which were pictured as a special problem needing modernization, consolidation and reorganization.

Victory Union Of Democrats, GOP Proposed

Vandenberg Urges Unified Committee on War Co-operation.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 5.—(AP)—A leading senate Republican, Vandenberg, of Michigan, today proposed a Republican-Democratic victory coalition—with "politics and New Deal out for the duration"—as the solution to wartime problems arising from the close party alignments in house and senate.

His idea is that congress should now create a "unified committee on war co-operation." The administration "should deal more openly with congress"—including the Republican leadership—and with the country. The election, he added, had demonstrated dissatisfaction with the conduct of the war.

Unity Not Lacking. Meanwhile, the house heard demands that the Wage-Hour law and National Labor Relations act be repealed, while a senate colloquy found a prominent Republican and a leading Democrat agreeing that Tuesday's many Democratic losses could not be attributed to any lack of unity on the war front.

Senator Connally, Democrat, Texas, arose, he said, to make it clear that the reverses of the administration party could not be interpreted by the propagandists of Berlin and Tokyo as any "repudiation of our war purposes."

He attributed them to public impatience with the prosecution of the war and resentment against Washington bureaucracy. Actually, he said, the voters had "registered a more desperate will to carry this war to triumph and victory."

Franchot Tone Cancels Contract Due To Wage Ceiling Order

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 5.—(AP)—Says Franchot tone's agent: "When Franchot wants to work for nothing, he'll work for the government."

The agent, Mike Levy, thus disclosed what is believed to be Hollywood's first contract cancellation as a result of the wage stabilization order.

Tone had orally agreed, through his agent, to work for Warners at a salary of $60,000 for one picture. But the wage ceiling prohibits Tone or any other actor from earning more this year than he earned last year.

State of Chaos. Meanwhile, elsewhere in Hollywood there was a pretty state of chaos. Dozens of big stars, producers and directors are not getting paid pending a clarification of the wage order. The checks are being made out, one studio said, but they can't be delivered.

The boards of directors of the Screen Actors' Guild, begged by the membership to do something, wearily and reluctantly came to Republican floor leader, agreed that "no issue of patriotism or unity" was raised in the campaign, and added that the administration had committed "enough mistakes and errors" to justify the people in calling it to account.

The Democrats' defeats, he said, represented revolts against wastes in expenditures which "astounded, abashed and shocked" him and against unnecessary employment by the government "of people who should be home working at real war efforts."

Vice President Wallace, leaving a conference with President Roosevelt, told reporters Mr. Roosevelt was in "excellent spirits." Wallace said the elections turned out the conclusion it couldn't do anything until Washington clears up the situation.

"If Tone," said Levy, "had signed the Warner contract (for 'Old Acquaintance' with Bette Davis and Miriam Hopkins) he would spend the rest of the year working for nothing."

Others in Same Boat. Tone already has earned nearly as much this year as last, Levy explained, and under the wage ceiling could keep only $20,000 of the $60,000 Warner's offered him—to say nothing of remaining idle the rest of the year. Warner's would save $40,000.

"It's principally because Tone had a bad year last year," Levy pointed out. "He was sick four months."

A lot of the other stars, Levy indicated, are going to be in the same boat, with little chance to duck the ceiling rule. Tone, he said, even offered to give to charity the $40,000 in Warner money he isn't permitted to earn, but it seems the law won't allow it.

way they did because only a relatively small number of voters participated.

He said millions of young citizens, now in the Army, did not vote, and that most war workers were too busy. This, he said, deprived the Democratic party of some of its strongest support. In times like the present, he said, an abnormally large proportion of voters are "people who are well-to-do, hence are more likely to be Republican."

"It is only a miracle that the house isn't Republican under these circumstances."

Later Wallace telephoned the reporters from his Capitol office to offer additional comment. He said he believed the Democrats had established a modern record in keeping control of both branches of congress for six straight elections, including this one.

"How long has it been," he asked, "since one party has held control of both branches of congress for six elections straight running?"

"The American people have all ways liked to shop around, and it indicates to an extreme degree their satisfaction when you find them giving majorities in both houses for 12 years straight, including this election."

"The breath-taking thing about it is the success of the President in holding both houses through six elections."

In the senate, Senator O'Daniel (Democrat, Texas) offered a bill to suspend the 40-hour week law during the war "to help solve our manpower problem." At the other end of the capitol, Representative Rankin, Democrat, Mississippi, and Representative Rich, Republican, Pennsylvania, called for repeal of both that law and the Wagner labor relations act, and demanded that the administration remove "Communists from key positions."

Rayburn Disappointed. In Bonham, Texas, meanwhile, Speaker Rayburn expressed disappointment at the election results but said the Democrats would control the house and that "we will be able to carry on and do all things necessary in the total war effort."

Senator Vandenberg advanced his coalition suggestion as returns, all but complete, from Tuesday's election demonstrated the party of President Roosevelt would have a plurality of no more than 15 in the house, and no more than 19 in the senate.

These were, moreover, purely paper margins. They assured the administration of enough votes to organize congress and retain Democratic committee chairmanships and majorities. But in view of the tendency of many Democrats to bolt the administration on important issues, the returns made it clear the administration could claim no dependable working majority.

The situation offered possibilities of prolonged and intensified inter-party quarreling. Vandenberg, chose, however, to take a different approach to the problem—that of co-operation and a united congressional front to push the war effort.

"The country," he said, "wants maximum efficiency and minimum mistakes. Meanwhile, it wants New Dealism and all other politics pigeonholed for the duration."

The Republican party made its gains, he added, "not on its own account," but because the country demands strict accountability from its government in the business of winning the war.

In all, the Republicans gained nine seats in the senate, capturing eight seats now held by Democrats, and that held by Senator George W. Norris, Independent, Nebraska. The party's total of 38 assured senate votes is 11 short of a majority of the senate.

In the house elections, Republicans took 45 seats now filled by Democrats, and one held by a Progressive. Meanwhile, the party lost five of its present seats to Democrats. Thus, its net gain was 41 seats.

With reports from three house contests still missing, the Democrats had elected 220 members, and the Republicans 208. A majority is 218.

Rommel's Match Found in 2-Fisted Montgomery

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

As Britain's third all-out offensive gathered momentum for the knockout blow in the sandy Egyptian graveyard of so many military reputations, it seemed apparent the army of the Nile had at last found a rider who could cope with the rough-and-tumble Field Marshal Erwin Rommel, ex-storm trooper and desert fighter extraordinary, against whose panzers many Allied thrusts have been blunted.

He is Lieutenant General Bernard Law Montgomery, a two-fisted, hard-fighting, non-smoking, non-drinking veteran of the World War and of campaigns in Palestine, India, Mesopotamia, and Flanders.

Second in Command.

Montgomery, second in command to General Sir Harold Alexander, who succeeded General Sir Claude J. E. Auchinleck as commander-in-chief of the Middle East last August, gained stature when he smashed Rommel's drive on Alexandria two months ago after the Germans and Italians had rolled the British into Egypt and threatened to drive on to Suez.

Montgomery had been in Egypt just three weeks when he stopped Rommel and began laying the ground work for the present offensive.

The fighting wasn't 24 hours old when observers noted tactics alien to anything the British had tried before. Instead of smashing ahead with armored units, Montgomery sent his infantry forward under cover of artillery fire to storm Axis defense positions and take them with hand-to-hand fighting. As gaps were opened he moved up his tanks, virtually intact, where they could come to grips with Axis tank concentrations in close fighting.

Unrelenting Raids. As these forces swung into action U. S. Army fighters and bombers joined RAF bombers and fighters in unrelenting assaults against Axis positions day and night. One by one Italian and German strong points were overcome, and eventually Rommel's whole army was in retreat.

The man who planned and accomplished all this is essentially a field man, not a desk fighter. Dressed in shorts, wearing an old Australian slouch hat and with a revolver strapped to his hip, he is a conspicuous figure often where the fighting is thickest. He scorns personal comforts and rides to the front in trucks and armored vehicles with his men.

Old campaigners remember his insistence that the only standard of fitness is the standard of total war. When he was appointed general officer commanding Britain's home guard, in 1941, he ordered a quarter-hour physical training at 7 a. m. for all headquarters officers and clerks under 40. All ranks up to brigadier had to run a six mile course once a week. This course was personally laid out by Montgomery, and he frequently covered it himself.

Love of Discipline. His love of discipline was manifest in the Devonshire maneuvers which were held last June. In them, he subjected his men to the same ordeal they would face in desert fighting. No food or drink could be bought in the villages.

and the infantry moved everywhere on foot, living on iron rations. The Alexander-Montgomery team of command is the third to face Rommel since the September drive in 1940, after the fall of France and Italy's entry into war. At that time General Sir Archibald P. Wavell was in command of Allied forces in the Near East, and his field commander was General Sir Henry Maitland "Jumbo" Wilson. They got off to a flying start by chasing Italian forces under Marshal Graziani all the way back to Bengasi. All Libya might have fallen if the British had not been compelled at this point to withdraw a part of their forces to strengthen a British expeditionary force in Greece.

Rommel Appears.

Meanwhile, Germans under Field Marshal Erwin Rommel made their appearance to stiffen the routed Italians on the desert scene. With his African Corps as the backbone of a revitalized German-Italian army, he fell upon what was left of Wavell's army and pushed it back to Egypt at a much faster clip than it had advanced.

Shortly after this Wavell was transferred to India and General Sir Claude J. E. Auchinleck came into command. With him came Lieutenant General Sir Alan Gordon Cunningham, who organized what Prime Minister Churchill hailed as Britain's greatest desert offensive, because it was undertaken with equipment to match the enemy's. This bold thrust opened well. It drove Rommel out of Cirenaica, raised the siege of Tobruk, and carried all the way to El Agheila, more than half-way across Libya. There the Germans held.

British Retreat.

After a period of indecisive sparring Rommel suddenly lashed back and drove the British into another retreat that halted well inside Cirenaica. Here Cunningham was succeeded by Lieutenant General Neil Ritchie. The next blow was not long in falling. The African Corps, supplied with fresh men and weapons, fell upon Ritchie—and not only rolled him up but swept clear into Tobruk, capturing 30,000 Imperials.

Without pause they pushed into Egypt, threatening Alexandria and Suez. General Auchinleck finally stopped Rommel at the Alamein line, barely 70 miles from Alexandria.

It was during this subsequent period of stalemate, when both armies were striving to reinforce themselves, that General Alexander succeeded Auchinleck and brought with him Lieutenant General Montgomery to command the Eighth Army in the field.

apparent "breather device" and pushed on ahead. Allied airmen reported desert roads and trails were packed tight with retreating Axis vehicles and their bombs tore huge gaps in these concentrations. Fighter planes also strafed Axis troops scurrying away from the roads. While all the Allied air forces spread continued destruction down the long, weaving lines of retreating motor convoys and armored vehicles, United States heavy bombers reached out to plaster Bengasi, Rommel's main rearward supply port. They hit four ships for sure and probably a fifth, reducing by that much the German marshal's chances of supplying his defense. In the air United States fighters got at least four more enemy planes during Wednesday's dogfights. No American plane was lost.

(Axis high commands said their desert armies had fallen back to "new lines" or "prepared second positions." Rome, placing the fighting between El Alamein and Fuka, admitted: "Our losses have been severe.")

Fourteen hours after issuing the special victory communiqué which announced destruction or capture of more than 260 enemy tanks, 270 guns, capture of more than 9,000 prisoners and death or capture of Rommel's highest commanders, the British GHQ said today in a regular communiqué: "The eighth army continued to advance over the whole front yesterday."

"In the south, the enemy is still holding out in a few isolated positions. "In the north, he has a screen of antitank guns and tanks which is withdrawing before our advancing forces."

Battle front disintegrates, necessarily retarded by crowded communication lines, told a graphic story of the initial Axis break. They quoted, too, the prediction of one British officer: "Once the enemy is pushed off this narrow front, which defied large-scale flanking, there will be no place for hundreds of miles behind him where he cannot be outflanked."

Desert dispatches indicated a surprising degree of unpreparedness in the Axis-front lines at the hour in which the British eighth army struck. Some advance posts, it now is reported, were not even manned. However, conservative officers believe there is still some hard fighting ahead for the eighth army; they point out that the existence of an enemy screening force shows Rommel has been able to hold his elements to gather to some extent in order to cover his retreat.

The unbearable punishment of British gunfire and aerial bombardment which finally—after 11 nights of incessant orders—rolled back Rommel's first line infantry, was related by Frank L. Martin, Associated Press battle correspondent, in a dispatch written Tuesday night.

"The withdrawal started in the northern sector, which had been under constant barrage for a week, and where the bombardment had reached such a pitch of violence that the Germans, injured to artillery terror in Russia, fell shellshocked into British captivity."

"The enemy was up against an ominous, ever-expanding bulge carved by British infantry into their fortifications west of the gap in the Alamein line, and bristling with American-made tanks and other armored machines. "Sheltering the enemy armor, massed to the northwest of this

Pacific Battle Not Yet 'Final Victory'—Knox

Secretary of Navy Warns 'Enemy Will Be Back Again.'

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 5.—(AP) Secretary of the Navy Knox said today American successes in the southwest Pacific are not to be taken as a "final victory" and warned that the "enemy will be back again."

Speaking to thousands of Navy yard employees who attended the christening of six tank-landing vessels, Knox declared "it would be folly to suppose" that the victory was permanent, adding: "But at least, after this opening round, the American Fleet is where it was when the fight began, whereas the enemy has withdrawn to lick its wounds and count its losses."

"We think the enemy is getting ready to come back. He will be met with the same skill and courage as before."

Commenting on the battle in Egypt, Knox said Americans are fighting there also. "We find there the Axis in full retreat," he added, "again let me say in all probability they will come back, but again they will be met with the same resolution and determination that has won the first stage of the battle."

Fabricated in a midwest steel plant, the six tank carriers were assembled in drydock into which water already had been flooded. Thus the christening, instead of a launching.

were killed in the same area, and four tanks and many motor vehicles were destroyed, it added.

Northeast of Tuapse on the Black sea coast the Russians said their troops "forged ahead somewhat," annihilating an enemy battalion and occupying another height.

The communiqué also mentioned a new sector—east of Novorossiisk—where a Russian group surrounded a farm occupied by 60 Germans and wiped them out to the last man. No fighting has been mentioned in this area for weeks since the Russians abandoned Novorossiisk in their retreat along the coast toward Tuapse.

Beat Off All Attacks. The situation as it had been summed up late last night before the issuance of the midnight communiqué.

Despite fresh German regiments and at least one new division, the Russians declared they beat off all attacks in Stalingrad, where the embittered siege of the Volga was in its 74th day. Along the Blinn day.

The Red army continued its attrition northeast of Tuapse, encircling and annihilating Axis troops. The noon communiqué quoted German prisoners as saying enormous losses had been suffered by their troops.

Even the recently-dormant Mozdok front in the Caucasus, east of Nalchik and athwart the approaches to Grozny's oil, flared into activity. The Russians said they beat off German attacks, then counterattacked, occupying an enemy strongpoint. The Germans recently had shifted their weight from Mozdok to Nalchik, the Russians attributed the change to 38,000 casualties they inflicted in September and October.

Reds Take Heavy Toll. (The Germans acknowledged tremendous Russian defense on the Nalchik plains, adding that "fierce offensive fighting is under way" in the Alagir area, 45 miles from Ordzhonikidze. Willkie Told by Montgomery He 'Would Eliminate Rommel'

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—(AP)—Wendell L. Willkie said in a statement today that when he was in Egypt two months ago Lieutenant General B. L. Montgomery said he "would eliminate Rommel."

"It is a thrilling and far-reaching accomplishment," Willkie said. "When I visited General Montgomery some two months ago when he stopped Rommel's advance, I was convinced that the present result would follow in a short while."

"General Montgomery told me then he would eliminate Rommel. He apparently is well on his way."

army. The London Daily Express estimated Axis casualties already at 40,000.

Maxwell Smuts cabled General Sir Harold Alexander, the Middle East commander, his gratitude for "your magnificent victory, the final dimensions of which will, I hope, make it the turning point of the war."

Sir Stafford Cripps, the former ambassador to Russia, told workers in a war factory that the Eighth Army was "destroying German and Italian land and air forces which might otherwise be joining in the attack on Soviet armies."

Promises More Action. "This is not the only diversion we can or shall make to help our Russian Allies," Sir Stafford said. "As our strength and that of our American Allies builds up, other offensives will be started in other areas."

Exiled Allied governments in London expressed confidence that the Egyptian victory was a prelude to imminent offensives in Europe. It was a great tonic to the governments of Norway, Poland, Belgium, Yugoslavia and the Netherlands.

King George cabled congratulations to General Alexander and expressed "the admiration and pride of the whole Empire in their (the Eighth Army's) brilliant victory." Mrs. Roosevelt, in turn, congratulated King George.

The British radio used many tongues to tell the subjugated peoples of Europe of the Allied triumph. The exiled governments' views that the offensive would snowball into a drive into Europe itself, found concurrence in German radio statements that the British aim in North Africa was to set up a "base for a second front."

Berlin broadcasters sugared the pill by calling Rommel's retreat a normal defense move under heavy assault pressure.

"Rommel still has plenty of room on his chessboard and can move as he likes," one broadcast said, "behind him there is excellent terrain. The master of desert strategy has often, in critical situations, dealt dangerous blows at the enemy."

The Germans stressed the British superiority in numbers. The Berlin radio was preoccupied also with reports of a concentration of Allied warships and transports at Gibraltar. Berlin said 14 merchant ships arrived late yesterday, joining a mass of British naval might, including the carriers Furious and Argus, the battleship Rodney, and large numbers of cruisers and smaller craft.

The Norwegian government said the victory would stimulate morale in countries overrun by the Nazis. Reuters reported from Australia that the feeling there was "that the tide is turning against the Axis."

Dispatches in the London press said Rommel had lost 80 per cent of his planes and more than half the 700 tanks he had when the British attack began.

Typical press comment was: "Rommel is hard hit and the Nile valley is saved . . . as great a feat as any of the war . . . a second front Hitler dare no longer ignore."

Prime Minister Churchill is expected to report on the battle and the whole course of the war when parliament reconvenes.

Desert Victory Brings Elation To Washington

Military Experts Hope Axis Army's Power in Africa Broken.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 5.—(AP)—The news of the British victory over Rommel's Axis forces at El Alamein has aroused elation in military circles, which are inclined, however, to view it as a still limited although brilliant success.

There is a general hopefulness that Lieutenant General Montgomery's British Eighth Army, supported by superior air strength, can follow up its advantage and destroy Rommel's force. But until this is done, experts who decline to be quoted by name say the chief immediate effect of the victory is to relieve the danger to Egypt.

The destruction of Rommel's army, one military objective, they say, and as yet that army has not been wiped out, although the situation of the British "looks awfully good."

A suggestion is advanced that if Rommel should succeed in re-establishing his lines, say at Matruh or Halfaya, the main British objective, destruction of the Axis army, still would not be realized. The British would have regained control of "a few hundred square miles of desert," but the battle then would have been an important victory only in the sense that it removed the threat to Egypt.

However, the death of one German general in the battle and the capture of another is regarded as a significant indication that the battle at El Alamein was not a mere rear guard action on the part of Rommel's forces. Ranking general officers ordinarily are not found in the immediate area of a rear guard fight.

H. S. Redding, Ex-Mayor, Dies At Waycross

Rites Are Held for Drug-gist and Prominent Civic Leader.

SPECIAL TO THE CONSTITUTION. WAYCROSS, Ga., Nov. 5.—Final rites for Henry Storey Redding, 67, former mayor of Waycross, were held at Grace Episcopal church, conducted by the Rev. E. M. Clayton. Burial was in Oakland cemetery.

Mr. Redding, retired druggist and widely-known civic leader, of Waycross, died Tuesday morning at his home here. He was a charter member of the Okefenokee Golf Club, and was a member of the Rotary Club. For many years he was a member of the vestry of Grace Episcopal church, serving for a long period as junior warden. He was born at Pittsburgh, Texas, and moved to Waycross as a small boy. Mr. Redding spent the remainder of his life here. He received his education in the public schools of Waycross and at Emory College at Oxford, Ga., later graduating with honors in chemistry at the Maryland College of Pharmacy.

He entered the drug business as a young man, and continued in that business until recently, when he retired because of ill health. Mr. Redding served for eight years as a member of the city commission, and was elevated to the highest civic honor in Waycross through his election as mayor.

Besides his wife, who was Miss Clara Lyon, of Waycross, and a niece, Miss Pauline Redding, of Philadelphia, daughter of the late Charles L. Redding, he is survived by three sisters-in-law, Mrs. William H. Ham, of Bridgeport, Conn., Mrs. J. H. Rucker, of Athens, and Mrs. Harrison Watts.

NO ANNIE OAKLEYS—Sergeant Jerome Leige, assistant manager of a War Department theater at the Atlanta Ordnance Motor Base, is shown in the box office of Post Theater No. 1 getting his tickets ready for an evening performance and hoping he'll have to use sign on the right. The sergeant was a theater man in civil life.

Theater Man, In Army, Still Running Shows

Sergeant Leige Assigned to Post Movie House at Motor Base.

The tradition of the theater, "the show must go on," is nothing new to Sergeant Jerome Leige, of headquarters and headquarters detachment, at the Atlanta Ordnance Motor Base on the old Jonesboro road.

Sergeant Leige was formerly an assistant manager with the RKO circuit in New York state, and his Army assignment is hardly any different because he is an assistant manager of one of the War Department theaters on the post. Leige began his career in show business almost eight years ago quite by accident.

Worked as Usher.

"I was walking past the RKO Keith theater in Richmond Hill, N. Y., one afternoon," he explained, "when the manager, who happened to be short of ushers, stopped me and asked if I would mind giving him a hand with a rush attendance. I worked all day and I liked it enough to accept a job as part time usher," he continued. "Later I was put on full time as a messenger and finally became chief usher."

The youthful sergeant worked in the publicity and advertising departments for RKO and later became assistant manager of the same theater in which he started his career.

"When I was inducted into the Army October 16, 1941," Leige confided, "I thought my theater days were over for the duration because I was sent to Fort Monmouth as a student-soldier in the general automotive mechanics course dealing with Army vehicle maintenance. However, when the motor base was opened in February, I was transferred to complete my course there, and I was soon back in the box office again working evenings in the theater."

Upon graduation from the motor transport school, he was transferred to the base headquarters detachment assigned to duty at the post theater as assistant manager.

Serious Duties.

War Department theaters, or G. I. (government issue) opera houses are operated through the United States Army Motion Picture Service. Sixty per cent of the profits are returned to the theaters for additional entertainment, improvements, conveniences and benefits of the soldiers. Coupon books with an admission value of $1.50 are sold for $1.20 to officers and enlisted men. Regular admissions are 15 cents. A total of 700 theaters exclusively for service men are in operation in the United States and overseas.

Jerry Leige really takes his Army assignment seriously and the receipts of attendance are proof. Not satisfied with running the theater in routine fashion, the 26-year-old sergeant, lends appeal and a touch of his personality to his weekly programs. One of his recent programs in form of an Army duty roster is an example of his breezy style.

Details for the week:

SATURDAY.

Private Dana Andrews and WAAC Virginia Gilmore will appear at the post theater for service in a surprise hit packaged with action. "Berlin Correspondent," K. P. duty suspended while Our Gang takes over in "Do It Their Bit." Special entertainment instruction in a new Popular Science Review and the latest Information Please.

SUNDAY.

All members of the company who are not walking guard on Peachtree street will report to the post theater for the first show at 6:15; second at 8:05 in the evening.

TUESDAY.

"Calling Dr. Gillespie" (Successor to Dr. Kildare). . . . Homicidal mania on the loose. Lionel Barrymore, Phillip Dorn, Nat Pendleton, and Dona Reed will report to the dispensary. Nine-minute furloughs will be granted for the purpose of visiting Glacier National Park Watertown Lakes under the supervision of Lieutenant Fitzpatrick. Zippy lesson in relaxation by the MacFarland Twins' orchestra in a Paramount headliner.

THURSDAY.

Formation by the company under the direction of the "Pied Piper" to see the outstanding picture of the week, "The Pied Piper" is a great epic about the people we left behind when we donned our uniforms. "Donald Gets Drafted" (Wasn't that duck we had for dinner Sunday?) All you future "Loeys" will have to know your current events. News Reel today.

FRIDAY.

Every Friday we bring you one of your old favorites. Let us know which ones you would like to see again. This week Gary Cooper returns with Barbara Stanwyck in "Ball of Fire," which was enjoyed here last March. Sergeant Leige doesn't have a favorite actor or actress, but he has a favorite expression—"Get your tickets at the box office."

HURT IN WRECK.

AMERICUS, Ga., Nov. 5.—Jody Robertson, Seaboard Air Line foreman, suffered a broken leg in a train wreck at Calhoun Falls, S. C., it was learned Wednesday. Reports indicate Robertson's injuries may not be serious. He was carried to an Elberton, Ga., hospital, and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Robertson, have gone to that city to be with their son.

Fund Success Will Hang in Balance Today

Final Third of $635,099 Quota at Stake on Last Day.

Complete victory in the Community Fund appeal will hang in the balance today as the 4,000 volunteer workers go all-out in the effort to reach the full quota of $635,099 for the final report meeting at 6:15 o'clock at the Athletic Club.

Signed pledge cards in hand have pushed the total raised to more than $400,000, and the final third was at stake in the last day of the intensive solicitation period. C. A. Stair, general appeal chairman, sent out an urgent plea to every worker to complete his assignment and attend the meeting tonight with a final report. "We are in sight of the goal," he said, "and having proved in the early stages of the appeal that we can succeed this year, for the first time in 20 years, I do not think we will be denied."

"I have tried to point out, all during this appeal, that Atlanta is willing and able to give the full amount this year. The test is in the hands of each individual worker. As each worker reaches his individual quota, we approach victory."

Mr. Stair asked that every worker stay on the job all day today and obtain the maximum pledge from every remaining prospect. "Last year," he said, "the average per capita Fund pledge in Atlanta was only $1.13."

"This year, so far, it is higher—much higher. But we have not yet approached the number of gifts that we received last year. We must do that before our work is done."

ATLANTA, GA., NOVEMBER 6, 1942.

Test for Congress

Republican gains for the new congress which convenes in January provide the setting for a genuine test of the ability and patriotism of the entire membership, but especially for the Republicans.

For there is but one problem worthy the name before both congress and the nation. That is, the winning of the war as promptly and as effectively as possible. Other issues may from time to time arise, of apparent urgency, but it must be remembered that, in the final analysis, they only derive their importance because of their connection with some feature of the prosecution of the war. Everything else must take but minor place in public consideration, save the achievement of victory.

With the two parties of approximately equal strength in the lower house and with the Democratic majority in the senate substantially reduced, no longer can members of the opposition party permit political considerations to dictate their attitude; no longer should they follow the policy of opposing everything which they conceive as of "New Deal" origin.

What is called for of the new congress is the full co-operation of every member for the sole purpose of successful war making. The country will stand for nothing short of this. There has been, in the past, too evident tendency to consider the political effect of any proposed action. If the new congress is worthy of the responsibility which will rest upon it, every member will forget politics and devote himself solely to the strengthening of the administration's ability to wage war. That is all that matters, now.

Of equal responsibility to aiding in the war effort, is the duty of co-operating in the formation of a better world after the war is won. Congress must, if it rises to this opportunity, co-operate not only with the administrative branch of this nation, but with the other nations which will share in the coming triumph of arms.

Unless international co-operation to the fullest extent is the basis of afterwar policy of the United Nations, the sacrifices now being made will have been in vain and another generation will be doomed to the horrors of a new war, perhaps after another quarter century has passed.

Blind isolationism must not again be permitted to doom a world to horrors, as it did when a little band of senate obstructionists, for selfish political ends, undid what our fighting men had done in the last war, by refusing to join in a League of Nations which, with American backing, could have averted the catastrophe of our time.

Never has America elected a congress facing such grave responsibilities as will face the one which goes into office next January. It calls for the highest sense of unselfish patriotism on the part of every member. The people will keep watch and observe how each member meets that test of national duty.

The Peace Officers

The annual convention of the Peace Officers' Association of Georgia is now in session in Atlanta. Approximately 600 law enforcement officers from all parts of the state are attending and there can be no doubt that the benefits springing from their discussions will be reflected in better enforcement of the law in this state.

Few groups have felt the impact of war more forcefully than the officers of our cities and counties charged with the duty of preserving the public peace and preventing the commission of crime. War conditions bring new problems. They must co-operate with organizations and individuals of the armed services and they must see to it that social conditions are of such character there shall be no avoidable handicap placed upon the nation's effort to bring victory.

Improved police methods are always to be sought. In time of war that improvement is more vital than ever.

North Africa Potentials

News from the North African battlefield is excellent. And, to add to satisfaction, is the knowledge that of all the battle areas in this far-flung war, none are of greater importance in the overall strategic picture than this, unless it be the Russian front.

For, if the British forces can now achieve their real objective, the complete elimination of Axis forces there, the way will be open for the opening of a new phase of the war in Europe, a phase which will mark the beginning of the Axis downfall. For complete control of the North African coast will carry with it control of the Mediterranean Sea. Of all the areas of naval importance, the Mediterranean stands second only to the Atlantic. Control of the Mediterranean opens the door to invasion of the European continent.

There is a further, and highly important, factor of political significance hanging on the outcome of the North Africa fighting. If the Allies are successful in eliminating Rommel's forces, it may well provide the straw which would bring the French colonies in Africa into active co-operation with the Allies.

There is, we know, growing unrest in continental France. That unrest is undoubtedly reflected in French North Africa. So far the French fleet and the French armies in Africa have been held in German subjugation. They have, too, been under the control of the same sort of French leadership as that at Vichy, which wants nothing more than to collaborate with a Germany they see as inevitably victorious.

Once change that picture and demonstrate that the Axis is doomed, and French sentiment and French leadership in Africa would probably swing over to Allied support. The French fleet and the French African armies are not yet actively in the war, but they constitute pawns with a still powerful influence.

If the Allies wipe out the Axis forces in Africa and thereby gain control of the Mediterranean, it makes possible an opening of a real second front in Europe. Not a desperate attempt to smash through the acknowledgedly tremendous defensive positions the Germans have created along the Western European coast, but up through Italy, or the Balkans. Italy is the vulnerable spot in the Axis. The Italian people may well be as ripe for revolt against Mussolini as are any of the conquered peoples ripe to arise against their Nazi masters of the moment.

If the invasion is made through the Balkans, the Allies would join with the still fighting Yugoslavian forces, which would be a powerful aid in establishing a bridgehead, say on the Yugoslavian coast. Or the Allied forces in Africa might turn, once the threat to Egypt and the Suez canal is definitely gone, and move up through Iran and Iraq to smash the German forces in the Caucasus from a new side.

There are innumerable opportunities. The one fact remains, however, that complete elimination of Rommel in Africa—which now seems possible—will open the way for a real offensive against the Germans.

No wonder Allied experts regard the battle of Egypt as the geographical center of the strategy of Allied offense. The winning of that battle can well mean the achievement of the first big step toward final victory. Loss of the battle would not mean loss of the war, but it would inevitably prolong it and add tremendously to the cost of victory, both in material and in lives.

We are watching, today, in Egypt, the most important battle since the Battle of Britain two years ago.

Georgia Editors Say:

SHIFTING CONDITIONS
(From The Brunswick News.)

We have long been told that politics makes strange bedfellows. The same thing is true of war. There are several examples at present. A few short years ago little Finland was regarded a real hero by people in the United States. Now, because of the exigencies of war, she is almost one of our enemies and we are having little to do with her diplomatically. Russia, which was formerly frowned upon in this country by many people, is at present one of our most valuable military allies. Moreover, although Russia is fighting Germany and Germany and Japan are all part of the same Axis, Japan and Russia are at peace, while Russia's allies are fighting Japan. War moves in devious ways.

Furthermore, several of the Latin-American nations have now joined the war against the Axis, or at least against Germany. This makes them potential allies of Russia, and the fortunes of these American nations in the war depend a great deal on what happens to Russia. Yet some of these nations are not yet diplomatically on speaking terms with Russia and do not recognize the Stalinist government. All in all, it is a muddled situation.

WASHINGTON PARADE

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS.

DEWEY'S VICTORY WASHINGTON, Nov. 5.—From the size of Thomas E. Dewey's victory in the New York gubernatorial election, it will remain a mooted question whether any other Democrat could have defeated him in a year which saw such a marked Republican swing.

He won by a margin of at least 250,000 over the combined vote of Attorney General John J. Bennett, the Democratic nominee, and Dean Alfange, candidate of the American Labor Party.

Mr. Dewey, the runner-up for the 1940 Republican presidential nomination, has been a popular vote-getter in New York ever since he made his first appearance on the political stage as a racket-busting district attorney. Four years ago he came within 66,000 votes of defeating Governor Herbert H. Lehman.

But whatever the facts, which will never be known, the blame for the loss by the Democrats of the country's most populous state will go to James A. Farley, former postmaster general and national party chairman, who took it upon himself to sponsor the Bennett candidacy without consulting more responsible elements within the party.

Mr. Bennett, a non-New Dealer, was hand-picked for the nomination by Farley. Working tirelessly without fanfare, Big Jim, as the Democratic state chairman, sewed up enough convention votes to insure the Bennett nomination before President Roosevelt and his political associates knew what it was about.

TOO LATE After the New Dealers discovered the Farley treachery, an effort was made to save the situation. Senator James M. Meade, one of the most popular figures the state has produced since the days of Mr. Roosevelt's governorship, was trotted out as an opposing candidate. The President and most of the higher-ups in the party in New York endorsed the Meade candidacy.

Had the primary system prevailed in New York there is not the slightest doubt that Senator Meade would have defeated Bennett for the nomination hands down. But Farley had already received commitments from a majority of the convention delegates, so his candidate went on to win easily.

Realizing that Bennett was a weak candidate, who would command only lukewarm support from New Deal elements and the labor union, Farley, in a move to save his own position, organized what usually polls upwards of 400,000 votes in New York state elections, efforts were made by the President's friends to effect a compromise.

To prevent the Republicans from carrying the state, the New Dealers, including the President himself, would gladly have given the nomination to Farley, although Big Jim had been somewhat at odds with the administration since the Chicago convention, where he led the opposition to a third term.

WOULD NOT COMPROMISE But Big Jim would neither give up nor compromise. Hence the results on Tuesday, which saw the New York governorship go to a Republican for the first time in 20 years.

That Mr. Dewey has Farley to thank, in large measure, for his election is evidenced by the returns from New York City, a traditional Democratic stronghold. He even ran Bennett a close race there, which indicates that many New Yorkers have no preference between the two major candidates, voted for Dewey out of spite.

Any other acceptable New Deal candidate obviously would have received the approximately 400,000 votes polled by Alfange, who otherwise would not have run.

Mr. Farley, therefore, is entitled to the dubious honors of having delivered New York state to the Republicans and to providing the G. O. P. with what promises to be its candidate for the presidency in 1944. Regardless of what Mr. Dewey has said about devoting the next four years exclusively to the governorship, he seems, at the present writing, certain to emerge as the Republican nominee two years hence. No one within his party should be able to stop him.

LOST CONGRESS SEATS Aside from the governorship and the 1944 presidential situation, the city of the Farley debacle is that it probably resulted in the loss of the several congressional seats the Democrats sustained in New York. Dewey's sweep carried many Republicans with him who otherwise would not have been elected.

As to the effect the defeat will have on Farley's future standing in the party, it is difficult to say. Had his candidate won, he undoubtedly would have increased his prestige and power tremendously, enabling him to occupy a commanding position with respect to the control of the important block of New York delegates to the next Democratic national convention. But all but nil. Certainly he cannot escape the responsibility for having led the party into a blind alley. Practically all of the influential leaders of the party in New York, from the President on down, sought to head him off. He would have had the advice of the party. Still, the political milk has been spilled—many of general Big Jim's former close associates are hopeful that he will see the error of his ways and join hands with them again in a more co-operative spirit.

WILLING TO FORGIVE During the eight years Farley sat in the Roosevelt cabinet and served as national party chairman, there was no more popular or more reliable figure in Washington. He earned an estimable footnote in history as the political leg man for Mr. Roosevelt and as the most effective political organizer the country has ever seen. He numbered his friends by the thousands.

These friends, most of whom have not permitted their warmth of feeling for him to be dimmed by his breaking away from old ties—his straying from the channels that brought him national fame—prefer to see him not as a traitor, but as a man still willing to forgive, and thus reserving an important place for him in the councils of the party, if he is willing to serve.

SILHOUETTES

By RALPH T. JONES.

Other

Worlds.

I, for one, have never doubted there are many distant worlds on which sentient life exists. It may not be in forms which we would understand. It may have followed paths of evolution far divergent from those of earth. Yet it seems to me for man to argue that his, among the myriads of worlds that revolve through all the universes of infinite creation, is the only one to have life, calls for a degree of egotism even too much for prideful humanity to swallow.

You have only to tilt your head upward on some clear night, when the lights of the myriad stars and planets and suns dot the heavens, to feel the insignificance of humankind upon this tiny dot we call earth. It is asking too much to ask us to believe that the Creator of it all selected this one infinitesimal speck of dust as the home of the only form of sentient life He made.

Oh, I know that scientists say there has been no acceptable evidence of life as we know it upon any other planet. And I know they argue that conditions upon many of them preclude the possibility. There is not sufficient atmosphere. There is not enough moisture. It is too hot or too cold. Maybe, for our form of life. But surely we cannot be so conceited as to argue that the Creator could not create life suitable for any material circumstances?

What Must They Think? Presuming then there are sentient beings elsewhere in the universe. Presuming further that many of them are far superior to us in knowledge and perceptive ability, so much so they can gain an idea of what goes on among us, if they should be at all interested in us?

Well, I imagine we must be quite inconsequential, unimportant and rather messy specimens of life. I can imagine some greater being peering through a globe under a celestial microscope and watching the antics of the tiny slugs, or larvae or parasites called mankind. And can't you see him watching with detached curiosity as these microscopic creatures destroy each other by the hundreds of thousands, with funny little things they make out of the metal in the ground. Some of them skitter around just above the surface of the earth, he will note, like flying ants, on other bits of material they have put together.

We must be a curious sight, under such a microscope.

What Is the Purpose? Sometimes I wonder what is the purpose behind all this killing and a life deduction.

And couldn't it be possible that man and all his works constitute, in reality, but a parasitic growth, fungus excretions upon the surface of the earth, and that, not so diseased, would be free from these irritants.

Perhaps, when man goes to war, it is in response to some unimaginable medicine Mother Earth has taken the effort to cure herself of the eruption these invisible pests, men, have caused upon her fair skin. Perhaps it is an oil so volatile we do not know it is there, but its effects are even in the air, that strange madness which impels mankind to war upon itself.

If this is true, there may come a happy day when Mother Earth shall be cured of her malignant disease, when all mankind will have been eradicated and the Old Lady is no more pestered with the itching she has suffered so long. Then, perhaps, the rest of Creation will permit Earth to come out of quarantine and to associate with other globes on former terms of equality.

Perhaps, then, communication between this and other worlds will be resumed after the long years of Earth's quarantine. Then, possibly, the world will reassume its place in that chorus which

FAIR ENOUGH

By WESTBROOK PEGLER.

To Correct Impression NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—If these dispatches have given an impression that Mr. Joe Fay, the hoodlum of the Frank Hague mob and the New Jersey chapter of the party of humanity, who doubles as union boss and contractor on some of the biggest war jobs, is strictly a lug at all times, that is incorrect and unfortunate.

Mr. Fay has moments of refinement, restraint and social hauteur as well.

Such an occasion interrupted his career of thuggery in September, 1941, when he gathered several of his friends about him and went off to Bermuda to attend the wedding in St. Paul's church, Paget, of an American young lady to a member of one of the first families of the island.

Mr. Fay's friends included William E. Maloney, the eminent Chicago sportsman, international president of the Construction Engineers' Union, of which Mr. Fay himself, is a vice president, and who has acquired through his devotion to the cause of labor, with an upper-case L, a stable of thoroughbred racing steeds and a winter home in Miami Beach near those of his fellow townsmen Al Capone and Frank Nitti. They included also Mr. A. (for Abraham), otherwise known to the police of Newark, as Longie, Zwillman.

Married Into Money Mr. Zwillman has dropped out of police circles in recent years, having married into the money, but back in prohibition days he was a very active figure and left several memoranda in the memory book of the police department. The data on Longie records five arrests on charges of atrocious assault and battery, including one with the additional notation of "intent to kill." All but one of these were dismissed with the notation "Complaint withdrawn," which is about what happened in Syracuse last winter when Joe himself was indicted for kicking the face of a colleague in the union racket, a felony charge good for five years in prison, and the victim forgot to show up for the trial as the state's principal witness.

That one gave off such a peculiar odor that Governor Lehman recently ordered that the papers be examined closely with an eye to skullduggery to the injury of orderly justice in the state of New York.

If a man is capable of atrocious assault with intent to kill, he is operating in a town where the police work is as loose as that of Newark, the victim of a slugging who withdraws his complaint need not necessarily indicate that he was to blame in the matter, that he has made a faulty identification, or that he desires to forgive. He could mean that he is afraid the guy who beat him up will walk out of the police station and beat his brains out.

Stuck Only Once At any rate, Mr. Fay's friend, Longie Zwillman, walked out of four charges of assault and was stuck only once, in which case his diploma says he got six months in jail and a fine of $1,000 on December 12, 1930. It is also recorded that he was convicted of loud and indecent language and got a suspended sentence on December 10, 1928.

But in 1941 Mr. Zwillman was very social, married and wealthy, and sailed to Bermuda aboard the S. S. Evangeline, a terrible old tub which many eastern winter cruise ships and patricians will remember without longing to be with his old chum, Joe Fay, at the society wedding.

An American sojourner who chanced to be on the island, and whose occupation has to do with police work in New York, was astounded to see Longie among the English Dukes of Bermuda society and remarked to a bartender that the encounter put him in mind of the morning lineup at headquarters and his old days on the safe and loft squad.

To Mr. Zwillman's credit it should be reported that he conducted himself in a strictly gentlemanly way and did not commit no atrocious assaults with intent to kill nobody, and that the island was no worse off when he left than when he came.

Traditional Fay Rite Mr. Fay, too, is said to have conducted himself well up to a certain point and tore up money delivered from his service to labor, with an upper-case L, with a dignity which was positively sensational.

It has been reported, however, that he finally became bored, and with his traditional cry of "I am! I'm!" took a swing from the floor and beat hell out of one of Bermuda's citizens, thus closing the evening with the traditional rite that scuffed up Dave Dubinsky of the garment workers' union at the New Orleans convention of the AFL, half-killed the mugg in the Syracuse case, and, in other times and places, has enlivened the proceedings of various union conferences and grand testimonial dinners.

makes the Music of the Spheres and there will be rejoicing in all creation that the repulsive disease known as "life"—I almost wrote it "lice"—will have been entirely eradicated.

Crazy thoughts, you say? Maybe, but worthy of contemplation. For, if imagination can accept such thoughts, even for a little while, they will go far to cure man of the overweening conceit that plagues him always.

Twenty-Five Years Ago Today. From the news columns of Tuesday, November 6, 1917: "New York, Nov. 5.—(AP)—From European Cables of the Day.—The Austro-German forces operating against the Italians along the Tagliamento river from the region of the Carnic Alps southward to the Adriatic sea are proving a serious menace."

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH MCGILL.

FOOTBALL I recall some years ago I was sitting around in Columbus, Ga., with a headache, Frank Foley and Jeff Kelly.

They were telling me that a young friend was applying for a job as head coach at Male High school in Louisville and, they said, if I knew anyone up there I could write to and help out the application they would be very glad indeed.

I said I did and would, and asked if they could tell me something about the young man. "Well," they said, "he is a Mercer graduate and he played end." It was the end that Phoney Smith used to run.

"Give me paper and pen," I said, "and I will write this very minute."

It so happens that Phoney Smith was one of the great backs of all time. And all great backs have their assistants. It may be a great leader of interference, a fine and deadly blocker, or it may be a great end or a line which can open up holes.

For instance, in the days when Joe Guyon was leading interference for the Georgia Techs, it was very difficult not to be a star ball carrier. I recall that in the days when Fielding H. Yost was making history at Michigan, he used to say that if there was the proper interference one could tie the ball around a dog's neck and let him follow the interference.

I do not mean at all to depreciate the ability or the value of one of those shifty young men with fast feet who can use up the value of their conveyance and then, when it is gone, start out on their own. The point I am trying to make is that too often the public and the critics do not give enough credit to the boys who open up the path.

Phoney Smith was one of the great backs and he had very little help. About the best help he had was from a chunky young man named Wally Butts. When Phoney couldn't gain anywhere else they called the signal for him to gallop off tackle just inside the end Wally Butts guarded.

In fact, Wally Butts went far beyond the usual assistance. He roomed with Phoney Smith and also gave him some help off the field.

As I recall, Wally Butts not only got the job but upset his chief rival that first year. He came to Georgia from Male High.

TWO COACHES Georgia has two of the nation's three undefeated, untied teams in Georgia Tech and Georgia.

It interests me to consider that neither coach ever played big-time football and neither had any great success which attracted them to their present jobs.

Wally Butts played at Mercer and played well with some excellent players. But Mercer's schedules in those days were not as ambitious as they are now. He never coached a college team before he came to Georgia. His first job was to coach the public school in there and fought for a chance for him.

Mr. William Alexander, who came to Tech in short pants to enter the junior department, never made the varsity team. He took five years of hard knocks as a scrub, which is the most valuable experience one may have. As I recall, they gave him a letter his last year just because he had taken so many hard knocks. He was a more or less obscure assistant until John Heisman left Tech.

Today I doubt if there is a greater coach anywhere. He has grown with the years and kept not merely apace of things, but a little bit in front of the times.

The young ones are coming on and doing great things, but they all owe their hats to William Alexander, who has been turning but good, modern teams for about 30 years.

A SHORT COUNT I telephoned out to Mr. Alexander's home on my return from a journey east, to ask about the short count which "The Old Man" is taking.

His gall bladder backfired on him and threw all his plumbing out of kilter. He always had a shortage of gall, anyhow, in marked contrast with some of the profession.

Also, I imagine the average alumnus never realizes how difficult he makes life for the coach—a winning coach. A losing coach has a pretty easy time of it as far as contact with the alumni is concerned.

Far off over the horizon he can hear the sound of the wolves. This isn't pleasant, but at least they are not pulling and hauling him by the lapels of his coat. Cock-eyed women are not rushing up and hugging him, smearing lipstick on his puss for him to explain at home, as they so often do when a tough game is won. Drunks and crackpots do not call on the telephone and in person when a game is lost.

Many a winning coach has had his arteries hardened and his gall bladder driven nuts by enthusiastic alumni who think the coach is something to toss around when the game is over.

I hope the Georgia Techs will let Mr. William Alexander take it easy for a couple of weeks with his books and his diet and his folks. Don't go to see him and don't ask to talk to him.

He has come up with one of his great teams just because he has a fair amount, no more than that, of first-rate material. I always have said he could get more out of less than any coach I have ever known. I hope this team will be a lesson to those who, in the years to come, will be asking if he isn't slipping when he has no material and drops some games.

Well, what I started out to say was that Georgia has two great teams and two coaches who merit the applause and confidence they are getting.

The Deadly Cobra Thrives in India Because People Do Not Hate It

By ROBERT QUILLEN.

Number of well-meaning people, including J. B. Priestly, urge us not to cultivate hatred because it would degrade us and bring us down to the level of the Japs and the Nazis.

Such people reveal a strange inability to realize what is happening. We have indeed grown soft in character if we have lost our old capacity for "righteous indignation."

No decent man can remain neutral or tolerantly indifferent to evil. If he does not hate it, his tolerance condones it. Do you think it sinful to hate evil?

In that vast world of books, the guide and inspiration of our fathers, you will find these words: "Thou shalt hate all workers of iniquity." And these: "Ye that love the Lord hate evil."

You will find these words, also: "These six things doth the Lord hate: Yea, seven are an abomination unto Him; a proud look, a lying tongue, and hands that shed innocent blood, an heart that deviseth wicked imaginations, feet that be swift in running to mischief, a false witness that speaketh lies, and he that soweth discord among brethren."

Does the Lord degrade Himself by hating these things, which are characteristic of the Nazis and the Japs? And shall we rebuke the Lord by making ourselves more pious than He is?

There is no moral strength in us if we cannot hate the brutish men who have made themselves unrecognizably hateful.

This does not mean that we should cultivate a screaming, frothing, maniacal hatred. We couldn't do it if we tried. Americans are not built that way. Their hatred is compounded of just resentment and disgust and loathing and a decent resolve to destroy what is treacherous and foul. It is a cold, calculating, grim and implacable hatred.

They crack jokes as they go into battle, and show mercy to a fallen enemy for the sake of their own self-respect, but they hate a murderer and unprincipled foe as they hate the inhuman pervert who tortures and kills little children.

As the pioneers learned to hate rattlesnakes and marauding varmints and the Indians who murdered their wives and children, so we must learn to hate before we can win this war.

People do not forget all else and sacrifice everything to destroy enemies who are merely disliked.

OFF THE RECORD—By Ed Reed

Dudley Glass

In my mail a day or so ago was a letter from a Thomaston person whose name has been well and favorably known to Americans since our first coins were minted. It is a name respected, even revered, by millions.

The signature was E. Pluribus Unum. The original Old Man Unum must have been a most prolific sire because his descendants are everywhere. As a writer of letters to the papers he ranks second only to Old Subscriber and runs well ahead of Faithful Reader. Indeed, Ardent Admirer always trails the field, if he starts. Which frequently he doesn't.

This Mr. Unum writes well, if somewhat vaguely. After perusing his missive several times it is difficult to grasp whether he is for me or against me. But I think he is against.

Mr. Unum starts out by congratulating me upon recent remarks about the quality of Eleanor Roosevelt's "My Day" but calls attention to the fact that she is a fine lady and the wife of our President—two facts which I gave full prominence.

Then he proceeds to point out that over a course of years I have indulged in my column in a long string of personal inanities about my household and my dog, how to make coffee and the shape my tires are in.

I am most willing to concede that Mr. Unum makes his point on that.

But his intimate recollection of those inanities, some of them dating back to '39, indicates that he has either kept a scrapbook or has a memory like an elephant's. He quotes items that have long been forgotten by their author and probably everybody else—except Mr. Unum.

After all, a column is designed to be read. Nobody asks that a reader agree with its views or admire its subject matter. And so, if one subscriber who thinks my column is terrible can quote it for three years back I feel that my career has not been entirely in vain.

P. S. Mr. Unum also thinks Ralph T. Jones is odious—in his column. But all is not lost. He writes that if it were not for Ralph McGill the dear old Constitution would be "floating on a rubber raft in the sea of oblivion."

Long life and health to Mr. McGill. I've had two newspapers sink and die while I stood in front of the "casualty" window—and that's plenty!

Just a Clock!

Add to useful articles you can't buy—alarm clocks.

That is, I couldn't buy one, though I searched far and wide. They're metal—and the stores can't get them.

As autumn creeps on toward winter and this new war time must be followed it is difficult to determine, in early morning, whether it is 6 or 9 a. m. It depends somewhat upon whether the moon is rainy, cloudy or sunny as a debutante's smile upon a first lieutenant.

clock, a beautiful work of art. One of its minor faults was that with cold hands and gold figures (perhaps they were merely gilt) you couldn't tell whether it was midnight or dawn without putting on glasses, turning on all lights and measuring to see which was the long hand and which the short. Another fault was that it frequently stopped, for no explainable reason except that perhaps I'd forgotten to wind it. And if it did run it would gain two hours one night and lose four the next, just to keep a good average.

This clock disappeared under mysterious circumstances, after I threw it at a visiting dog. Maybe the dog wanted it.

So a week or two ago I went on a city-wide search for a clock. A plain, nickel-plated 65-cent clock, with or without an alarm. It is rarely I require an alarm, having few trains to catch.

But there is no such animal anymore. You can't buy a 65-cent clock for $5.65, plus tax.

But I did find, for $2.58, a handsome electric clock which needed only to be plugged in and forgotten. It wouldn't need winding. The Georgia Power Company would attend to that.

It went fine for a few nights. And then it started buzzing and clicking and knocking and echoing until I feared the neighbors would be disturbed. I tried shaking it and tapping it and turning it sideways. All these remedies worked—for half-an-hour. Then the clock, possibly feeling lonely, would start making its presence heard again.

I put a spare pillow over it, but it clicked through all the feathers. So I pulled out the plug—and now I don't know what time to get up. I've tried placing my faithful watch beside my bed, but I either forget to take my watch upstairs on retiring or to take it downtown next day.

I'm thinking of employing a valet, who will creep silently into my boudoir at 8 a. m., remove the covers delicately, touch me under my chin and announce that my bath is waiting. Maybe he could find me a fresh pair of socks. Which is a task far beyond my accomplishments.

Tire Inspectors Get Instruction

Final instructions paving the way for the operation of the new OPA mileage rationing program will be presented to more than 300 filling station operators and tire dealers of Fulton and DeKalb counties at 8 o'clock tonight at Commercial High School.

Attending will be all present tire inspectors, and all prospective applicants for appointment as inspectors. Alvin Wingfield, state chief tire inspector, said. Under the new OPA plan, motorists must have their tires inspected at regular intervals in order to qualify for either gasoline rationing or tire rationing.

It has been estimated that one station for each 350 motorists will be necessary to carry out the requirements of the inspection program. This means that approximately 400 such stations must be established in Fulton and DeKalb counties, Wingfield said.

Legion Head Attacks Draft Bill Restriction

WILMINGTON, Del., Nov. 5.—(AP)—Roane Waring, of Memphis, Tenn., national commander of the American Legion, said today the senate is trying to "scuttle" the selective service law respecting 18 and 19-year-olds, and asserted that the amendment demanding a year's training is "all poppycock."

"The 18 and 19-year-old group must go into the Army," he said in an interview, "the amendment providing a year's training is all poppycock. The training may be achieved in a much shorter time. These men are not going to be trained as skilled technicians. They will drive tanks and trucks and take an active part in the war."

Navy Needs 117 Negro Musicians

The United States Navy is looking for 117 Negro musicians in the southeastern division, the Atlanta Navy recruiting office announced yesterday.

Bandmaster John R. Glover, here to interview applicants, said the Negroes will be enlisted as musicians, second class, at $60 per month. They will be given indoctrinal training at Great Lakes, Ill., and then assembled into band units for assignments.

Full information may be obtained at the Navy's Negro recruiting building, in the New Post Office building.

Newest U. S. Military Medal: Legion of Merit

WASHINGTON, Nov. 5.—(AP)—The establishment of a new military and naval decoration, the Legion of Merit, was announced today by Secretary of War Stimson.

Like the Purple Heart, re-established by the Army in 1932 as an award for wounds coupled with bravery in action, the new Legion of Merit was based on the badge for Military Merit established by George Washington in 1782.

The decoration will recognize "extraordinary fidelity and essential service" in a position of responsibility and will be conferred upon outstanding officers and enlisted men of the United States or of friendly foreign nations.

Good Morning

By LOUIE D. NEWTON.

WINDS OF WINTER.

Never in my life have I seen an autumn season of such natural beauty and splendor, never an autumn of such harvests, never an autumn of such seasonal flowers, never an autumn of such continuously favorable weather. "The windy lights of autumn flare—I watch the moonlit sails go by," and I know that the cry of winter winds will soon be heard in the still night—winds that will drive the dead leaves into somber memorials of summer's glory—winds that will bring the chilled rains and the silent flakes of snow—winds of winter that will now, even as in the days of Milton, "strow the brooks in Vallombrosa, where the Etrurian shades high over-arched imbower."

I know that. But in the meantime I revel in these lingering days of autumn's glory. Every bush is aflame. Every tree glows with celestial radiance. The hills are robed in royal garments of God's own handiwork. The valleys stand so thick with corn.

"Day unto day uttereth speech, and night unto night sheweth knowledge and understanding, by my mouth, and the meditation of my heart, he acceptable in Thy sight, O Lord, my strength, and my Redeemer." Selah.

I have been at work today (Tuesday) in the yard and patch, clearing the flower beds of the frost-charred annuals, planting bulbs for early spring blooming, picking peas and other late crops in the patch. It has been a day of continuous worship. A day of thanksgiving. A day of the birds have been about me all day in the patch—doves, quail, cardinals, mocking birds, blue jays, brown thrashers, bluebirds, sparrows, humming birds, crows. They did not appear preoccupied. They were not apparently worrying about anything. They were enjoying the bounty of the harvest time, and they were singing! You might not agree that crows sing, but I fancy they sound about as well as some of us do when we try to carry a tune.

It has been a day of great fellowship—fellowship with my always faithful dog, fellowship with the fish in the pools, fellowship with the chickens, the grown ones and especially those wonderful biddies from the eggs that Dr. Rufus Rogers sent me, fellowship with the birds, fellowship with the flowers—the gorgeous chrysanthemums that seem to defy the frost, the persistent late roses, the salvia, the verbena, and on and on and on. And fellowship with all the trees and shrubs on the place, and the matchless tapestries of the rolling hills that have lifted my soul in wonder and faith all the day long.

And now, tonight, as I sit here in my study, waiting for the soldier and his bride, I hear the winds of winter; but somehow, by God's help, I humbly and confidently say, "If winter comes, can spring be far behind?" And with Solomon of old, I declare, "For, lo! the winter passes, the flowers shall appear, the time of the singing of birds shall come again..." Selah.

Arnall Pledges Streamlined Highway Patrol

Governor-Elect Speaks to Peace Officers' Association.

A streamlined state highway patrol with fewer, higher paid members and "out of the grasp of scheming, selfish politicians" was the promise of Governor-Elect Ellis Arnall, who predicted that many patrolmen, including some higher-ups, will be looking for defense jobs after his inauguration January 15.

There will be no moving day as in previous changes in management at the capitol, but the process will be a gradual one in which dead timber will be culled in cases where they don't have the good judgment to resign," he told the Peace Officers' Association of Georgia, in annual convention at the Ansley hotel.

"It is no secret that in my judgment the patrol does not now enjoy the confidence it enjoyed at one time," the young attorney general declared. "That is an indictment of the patrol as generally constituted. But I can promise you this: The patrol will never again be used as a political machine for use in a campaign. I'm going to ask the legislature for a constitutional amendment removing the patrol from the grasp of scheming, selfish politicians."

Utmost Economy.

While utmost economy is the keyword of his program to "stick the people into a realization that we are at war" and keep provision will result in many phases of the state government, Arnall said he believed "two adequately paid men are more efficient than four inadequately paid officers."

Gusty applause greeted his announcement he would recommend higher salaries for patrolmen to the legislature.

Peace officers, who had to take a "seventh-inning stretch" in the course of their eight-man lineup of speakers, heard themselves praised for honesty and efficiency by two solicitors general, Eugene Cook, of the Dublin circuit, and Dr. J. Parker of the Waycross judicial circuit. Both urged them to organize after the manner of labor to obtain legislation and other requirements for best work.

One hitchup with which they are faced, Cook told them, is the antiquated code of laws of criminal procedure and measures dealing with violent conduct of criminals.

Small Bloc.

"Unfortunately," he commented, "the legislature always has in its body a small but powerful political group of lawyers who would starve to death if corrections were made. These lawyers depend entirely upon these inadequate and defective laws of procedure as means of their livelihood. They are paid in proportion to their ability to delay, to take advantage of and to manhandle the courts by the use of such laws."

"And may I hasten to say that these lawyers do not represent the attitude nor the character of the majority members of my profession in and out of the general assembly."

Farker, who placed policing with agriculture, manufacturing and transportation in importance, said crime was costing the United States $15,000,000,000 each year, or about $115 for each person in the country.

Other speakers included A. C. Peacock, deputy tax collector of Fulton county; Mayor Hartsfield, who welcomed delegates; Sergeant E. S. Burke, of Georgia Bureau of Investigation; and President M. Gary Whittle. The association will end its convention with a banquet tonight.

LOUIE NEWTON TAKEN IN BY SELF-EVIDENT JOKE

Editor, Constitution: In my customary perusal of The Constitution's daily editorial and op-ed, page features, I came to Louie D. Newton's "Good Morning" column of Friday, October 30. That column I read with emotions rapidly pursuing one another in this order: interest, amusement, amazement and intense worry.

Interest—because I have heard the same yarn so many, many times in past weeks from many, many persons from many, many sections of the country. Just to check, I asked the two girls in our office if they had heard it; one replied, "Oh, nine or ten times," the other, "A dozen times or more."

Amusement—because a man of Dr. Newton's brilliance evidently was "taken in" by it, as were members of his congregation.

Amazement—for the same reason. Worry—if highly intelligent persons accept tables like these, what can be put over on the masses?

The story about the handless soldier and the blind soldier may possibly be taken in three different ways:

1. I personally first heard it as one of many gags recently being told principally by men who expect soon to be drafted, gags on how short the Army is running in manpower. I, and the person who told me, regarded the tale as a caper. I have been guilty—if that's the word—of repeating such alleged jokes myself, and even sent some of them to Dudley Glass, who used them in his column ("If you can see light, you're in the Army").

"The draft board doctor feels you; if you're still warm, you're off!" And I thought of the story as only one of a series, since "jokes" do run in series.

2. The tale could be a truly inspirational one if, it could possibly be true. Apparently Dr. Newton and members of his congregation, accepting it as truth, were inspired. Maybe that Minnesota sergeant was inspired, too, but personally, I think he was pulling the good doctor's leg. Can you imagine the Army permitting a handless man or a blind man serving in any capacity until and unless we are pushed back inland from our own shores? That is not to doubt the patriotism of the afflicted, but is could not be permitted for the good of the many.

3. My belief and I think you will agree—is that this story, if not actually started by the Fifth Column, is exactly what the Fifth Column wants. I am no alarmist or looker-under-beds, but I know what the reason to the story is going to be soon: Many a mother, already hysterical at the thought of her boy going to war, is going to moan, "You know, they're actually taking in blind boys now, and boys without hands!" That's not wild talk; it's happened before. Many a person is going to grow panicky at that story, if it is told as the truth. I'm even sorry now that I told it as a joke, for someone might accept it as true.

Labor Board Said Clogged By Grievances

Philip Murray Charges Acts of Companies Are Sabotage.

BOSTON, Nov. 5.—(AP)—President Philip Murray, of the CIO, asserted tonight many employers were attempting to sabotage the War Labor Board by clogging its machinery with unsettled grievances.

Murray proposed that the board issue a general order to require an arbitration clause in existing collective bargaining agreements to keep grievance disputes out of Washington.

He also declared the board was in "confusion" over the adoption of "understandable procedures" to expedite the disposition of voluntary wage agreements.

The CIO chief told newsmen these were the views of the international executive board, as well as his own.

The organization leaders held their first meeting today as a preliminary to the annual CIO convention next week. Murray said the board decided to protest to the National Labor Relations Board against what he termed the "collusive agreements" made by AFL unions and some Pacific coast shipyards, particularly those of Henry Kaiser.

Companies Refuse to Arbitrate. Reporting the proceedings of the executive board meeting, which was closed to the press, Murray said that President R. J. Thomas, of the United Auto Workers, had charged that "collective bargaining at many plants in the auto industry is breaking down by reason of management refusal to settle grievances by arbitration where the grievance committee and plant management failed to reach an agreement."

"It appears that many companies—and other industries as well as the auto—are sabotaging agreements by having their managers advise our grievance committee representatives that they can go to the War Labor Board, that they do not propose to settle the grievances."

"The (CIO) board was informed that thousands of such cases are being brought to the War Labor Board. And it was also informed several thousand voluntary wage agreements are pending and due for consideration by the board or Director Byrnes, of the Economic Stabilization Committee."

Sense of Frustration. "It seems the machinery of the War Labor Board is completely clogged and organized workers throughout the country feel a sense of complete frustration."

Asked for an explanation of the charge against management, Murray said:

"It was a deliberate attempt of management to sabotage the War Labor Board and undermine collective bargaining. They know the board has an outstanding commitment not to strike and they are taking advantage of it. They want to break down the work of the War Labor Board by clogging it with these cases."

Murray said the CIO would ask the board to issue a directive to all companies and unions, where agreements are now in existence, or are being negotiated, to include provisions for arbitration of disputes where the grievance machinery breaks down.

Flyer E. S. McCuskey

Awarded Navy Cross

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Nov. 5.—(AP)—Lieutenant E. S. McCuskey, United States Naval Reserve, of Stuttgart, Ark., today was awarded the Navy Cross for extraordinary heroism and distinguished service by Captain J. D. Price, commandant of the Jacksonville Naval Air Station.

While piloting a plane with his fighting squadron, during an attack on enemy ships in Tulagi Harbor, McCuskey led his section in repeated attacks against an armed enemy transport and destroyer, silencing the destroyer's guns and severely damaging it, the citation said.

Lieutenant McCuskey displayed skill and bravery which contributed materially to the success of the attack against an enemy carrier.

HE HIT THE JACKPOT MONDAY—I. Lewis Merlin, of Atlanta, was thrusting out his chest Monday. All in one day he was promoted to sergeant, given a 10-day furlough, and the people of St. Petersburg, Fla., where he is stationed with the Army Air Forces, presented him with a plaque (above) for managing the Army shows there.

Spotty Results Obtained in Nation's 'Sixth Tire' Program

WASHINGTON, Nov. 5.—(AP)—The nation's motorists seem to be slowing down to the wartime speed limit, but are not doing so well when it comes to selling their "sixth tires" to the government, Rubber Co-ordinator William M. Jeffers reported today.

Victory Tax May Be Paid By Individuals

Citizen May Pay When Filing Return in March of 1944.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 5.—(AP)—Treasury officials indicated today that payment of the victory tax would be the problem of the individual if an employer refused to collect it as provided by law.

Questions about a report that Georgia state law has been interpreted to prohibit deductions at the source from the salaries of state employees, a treasury spokesman, declining to be named, said that it appeared that the employee in such a case would be required to assume responsibility for paying the tax unless an arrangement could be worked out with the state government for withholding it from his salary.

The law provides for a 5 percent tax on income above $624 a year. It provides also that the employer should collect this tax by withholding it from the salaries and wages he pays. However, it was pointed out, the tax is upon the individual who receives the salary or wage, and it is this recipient who must make an accounting of the victory tax when he files his 1943 income return on March 15, 1944. The victory tax must be shown on that statement, and if it has not already been paid through employer it will be necessary for the taxpayer to pay it directly.

Such will be the situation in any event for numerous persons who do not receive regular salaries or wages such as professional people.

While the law does impose upon employers the responsibility to collect the victory tax through a withholding process, treasury officials were hesitant to discuss a problem such as that which appears to exist in Georgia. It was learned, however, that that particular problem came up in private conferences while the new tax law was under consideration in congress.

Maria Ouspenskaya Hurt On Hollywood Film Set

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 5.—(AP)—Maria Ouspenskaya, veteran character actress, suffered a fractured right ankle today. A two-wheeled cart in which she was riding with Lon Chaney Jr., during the filming of a scene at Universal studios, overturned. Chaney was injured only slightly.

Lewis Merlin, U. S. Showman, Made Sergeant

Citizens of St. Petersburg Present Atlantan With Plaque.

Monday was a big day for I. Lewis Merlin, of Atlanta. Not only did he receive that extra stripe that made him a sergeant and a plaque from the citizens of St. Petersburg (Fla.) in appreciation of his work, but he left his job—beauty contest, variety shows, radio broadcasts and all—to his less fortunate coworkers, and set out for a ten-day furlough at home.

Sergeant Merlin, who is attached to the athletic and recreation office of the Army Air Forces Replacement Training Center in St. Petersburg, had never been in show business when he joined the Army as a buck private six months ago, but on arrival in St. Petersburg he started on a morale-building program that has made his job comparable to that of a Broadway producer and filled his scrapbook with as many press notices as a movie star's.

Besides writing, casting, directing and acting as master of ceremonies for the weekly Army show in St. Petersburg's Williams park that has been drawing record crowds (11,000 one night), he does three shows at the post each week, organizes and furnishes talent for two dance writes and produces a radio show, and at present is turning out ideas a mile a minute for ballooning a beauty contest to select Miss Air Forces of 1942.

"The first night we did the Williams park show, I had no idea what a master of ceremonies did, so I just got out there and acted like the Georgia cracker I am. Everybody started laughing, and they've been laughing ever since, so I guess I'm a success," he explained.

Sergeant Merlin, the son of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Merlin, of 321 Capitol avenue,

Knox Walker Will Welcome School Heads

Administrators Begin 2-Day Convention Here Today.

Knox Walker, of the Fulton county school system, will welcome delegates to a two-day convention of the State Association of School Administrators at the Henry Grady hotel today.

Allen C. Smith, superintendent of the Quitman public schools and president of the association, will preside at the sessions which will be high-lighted by a banquet tonight. Dr. A. C. Flora, of Columbia, S. C., president of the National Educational Association, will speak at the dinner.

Paul W. Calhoun, superintendent of the Montgomery county school system, will deliver the response at this morning's meeting. Other speakers this morning are Dr. L. D. Haskew, president of the Georgia Education Association, and Dr. Willis A. Sutton, superintendent of Atlanta public schools.

A discussion of "Visualization for Victory," by C. R. Reagan, educational advisor of the Office of War Information, will follow the morning session.

The afternoon meeting will be devoted to panel discussions and an open forum on audio-visual aids.

Tomorrow morning talks will be given by Dr. M. D. Collins, state superintendent of schools; Dr. M. L. Brittain, president of Georgia Tech, and Mrs. J. R. B. Branch, of Macon, who was a resident China for 35 years.

Delegates will be guests of Dr. Brittain at the Georgia Tech-Kentucky football game at Grant Field tomorrow afternoon.

Military Instructors Needed in Mexico

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 5.—(AP)—Senator Arturo Martinez, Adorno of Mexico City said today the rush of volunteers in Mexico to take military training was so great the government was running short of people to train them.

"In addition to our regular army," he said in an interview, "in each of our 28 states there are at least 100,000 persons voluntarily training for military service. They are entirely ready and willing to go outside the nation."

Senator Adorno will represent President Avila Camacho at a "Salute to Russia" rally Sunday.

James Larry Sullivan Dies in Hospital

In addition to his parents, he is survived by a sister, Mary Louise Sullivan; three brothers, David, Donald and Eugene Lee Sullivan, and his grandmother, Mrs. Donie Evans. Funeral plans will be announced by J. Allen Couch.

Alaska Is 'Boot Ready To Kick Japan in Pants,' Hubbard Says

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—(INS)—Alaska is an important strategic boot, "poised and ready to kick the flanks of Japan," Alaska's famous politician, Father Bernard Hubbard, declared today.

"It's mighty fancy language to say 'Alaska is a dagger' pointed at our heart or the heart of Japan," declared this international explorer and authority on Alaska, "but adjacent islands and waters."

"Just say it's a boot poised for a good, swift kick where it will do the most good," said Father Hubbard, who is in the United States on a brief lecture tour concerning his beloved Alaska.

But this explorer sees America's vast northern territory as something more than a vital springboard for attack in the North Pacific, he said.

A peace-loving Alaska with a prosperous population of 15,000, 000 persons instead of her present 75,000 citizens is prophesied by Father Hubbard at the eventual result of the new military highway through Canada, linking America and Alaska for the first time.

"Previous to its completion, Alaska was like an isolated island," he pointed out. "Now, with this new highway completed, a railroad becomes only a matter of time. With eventual highway links into the interior and in southeast Alaska, the territory will attract the 15,000, 000 citizens she merits."

Good Farming Land. "So much 'hokey' has been written about Alaska that it is difficult to persuade people that its climate is more hospitable than in some parts of the United States."

"But Alaska is a vast territory of 500,000 square miles, ideal for agriculture and dairy farming. It can easily support 15,000,000 persons on an American standard of living."

Father Hubbard, who now spends most of his time with American troops in Alaska and the Aleutians, said that men arriving from the United States far more apprehensive of Alaska than of the enemy.

"There is too much misinformation floating around about Alaska," snapped the big, dark-eyed priest, who has spent 16 years mapping and surveying the territory he loves.

Eskimo Loyal American. When asked if the Eskimo would be as loyal to the United States as the Filipino, Father Hubbard looked his amusement.

"An Eskimo is an ethnological curiosity. There are no more than 2,000 pure-blooded Eskimos in the whole world. But the position of the American Eskimo is exactly that of the American Indian: He is an out-and-out American."

"Naturally he is for the United States. How could he be for any other else when he is an American?"

Father Hubbard, so certain that all Alaskan territory will be in American hands by Christmas Day in Kiska, the last Jap-held base.

Jap Diplomats In Europe Will Meet in Berlin

Envoys Will Check Up on Axis 'Progress,' Bern Hears.

BERN, Switzerland, Nov. 5.—(P)—Japanese diplomats in Europe have been called to a conference in Berlin at which, foreign observers said, they possibly will check on how far they can count on their Axis partners keeping up their end of the fight under the Allied air bombardment, the attack in Egypt and in face of a second winter in Russia.

These observers also thought that the Japanese also would go over general war aims and that the warfare at sea doubtless would be an important point.

There have been reports that Japanese submarines are in the Atlantic and there is no doubt that the Axis is eager to obtain the fullest Japanese co-operation at sea on this side of the world as well as in the Pacific.

The Neue Zuercher Zeitung correspondent, meanwhile, reported that the diplomats had been called

Nazis Explain How Generals Were Lost

BERLIN (From German Broadcasts), Nov. 5.—(P)—General George von Stumme, 56-year-old first World War veteran who commanded the Axis African armies when Marshal Erwin Rommel made a recent trip to Germany, was killed October 24 on the first day of the present British drive.

His successor as second-in-command to Rommel, General Ritter von Thoma, fell into British hands later when his armored car was cut off from the column he was commanding, the German radio announced in its version of news already broken by the British.

"In the dust and smoke of battle," DNB said of the tank expert, Von Thoma, "he was captured unnoticed by his tank crews."

The slain General von Stumme became a full general in 1940 and was decorated with the Knight's Cross of the Iron Cross in May, 1941.

to discuss new means of co-operation under the tripartite pact.

The first speculation in foreign circles was that the conference might concern Russia, but information given out in Berlin emphasized that the conference, which is expected to open in the next few days, would deal primarily with organizational problems.

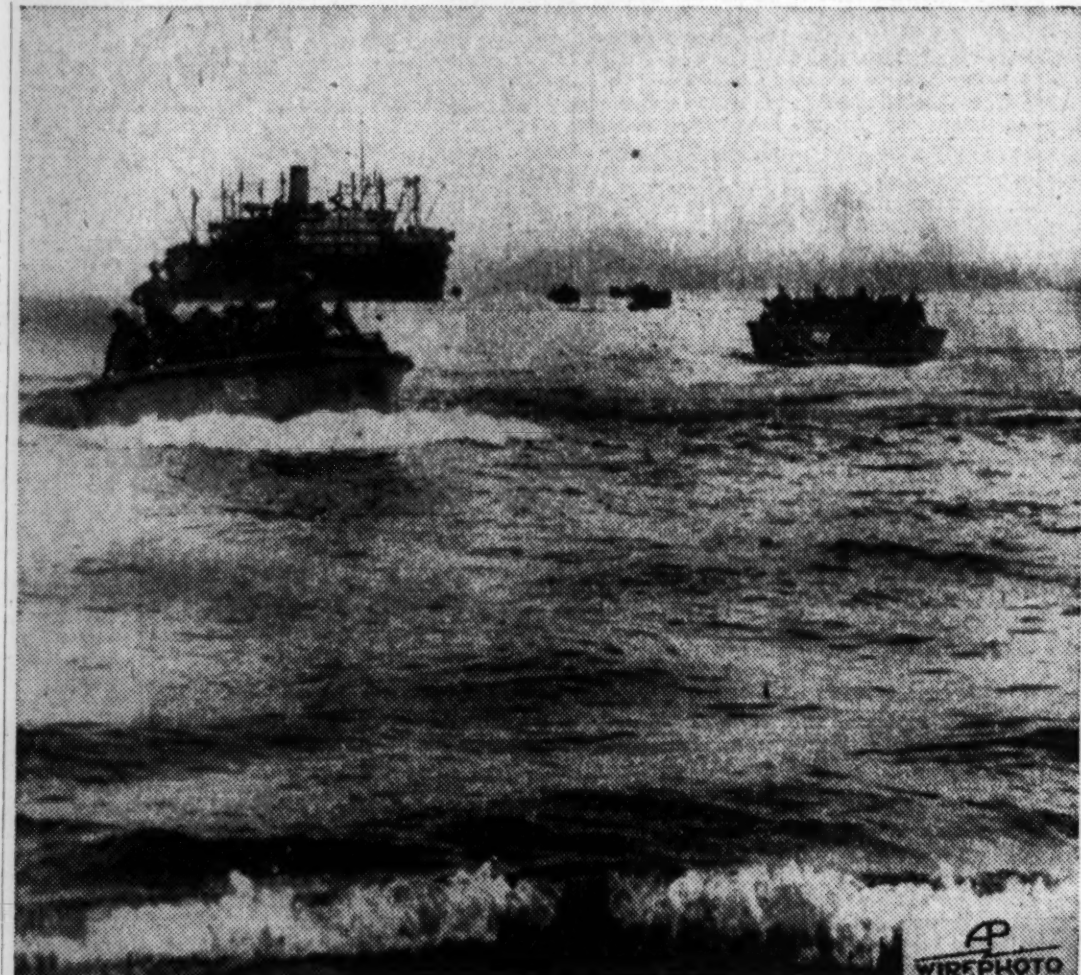

Twelve to 14 chiefs of legations and embassies, including the envoy to Ankara, have been summoned to the conference, which, some observers said, could concern:

Japanese relations with Russia and whether the Axis policy requires Japanese participation in the Soviet campaign; despite the lateness of the season; the Near East policy and the possibilities of co-ordinating the Japanese and German drives toward the Middle East junctions; the Axis summer drives that failed.

Atlanta Enjoys English Version Of 'La Boheme'

Largest Audience of Season Hears Puccini's Masterpiece.

By EUGENIA BRIDGES HARTY

Boy met girl along about 1896 at a theater in Turin, Italy. They made love, quarreled and patched it up again, for the first time then to Puccini's ageless melodies of "La Boheme." Last night, it happened all over again at the municipal auditorium but in a strange language—English.

"I must get rid of this old boy," sang one of the most effective "Musettas" on record to her elderly swain. She is Frances Greer, lovely Metropolitan Opera Company fledgling.

The largest audience of the season giggled. It was fun, they decided, knowing what they were hearing. And usually they did know. The singers' diction was fine with a few exceptions—the chief being that of a Wagnerian bass-baritone, Walter Oletzki, who "nopeaks," it would appear. Also he was badly miscast in a role which requires a light touch both vocally and dramatically.

Burke as "Mimi," has the same lovely voice texture evidenced here before in this role—but she has put on too much weight to be a convincing sick girl now. Also, she had flitting trouble on a couple of A's, although she maneuvered her high C right in the groove.

Her boy friend, "Rodolfo," portrayed by Armand Tokatyan, was excellent. A true tenor, Tokatyan also possesses the smooth finesse of a veteran showman. Historically and vocally, he was superb. Mack Harrell, young baritone of the Met, sang the role of "Marcello" and carried off a considerable portion of the top honors of the evening. His wealthy voice and sure understanding of his acting assignment doubly endeared him to all star subscribers, who cheered him and his fickle sweetheart, "Musetta," or Frances Greer.

Other members of a competent cast included Roberto Silva, George Rasely and Carlyle Bennett.

The scenery and costumes were surprisingly very much all right. And Atlanta contributed four members of the local Civic Ballet to add to the beauty of the feminine background.

The near-capacity audience thoroughly enjoyed the opera, crowding in far ahead of time to get in their seats before the curtain rose on the Atlanta Music Club's second All Star presentation. The next attraction on the series will be a concert by Jascha Heifetz, scheduled for November 21. Giuseppe Bamboschek conducted the orchestra and gave a highly satisfactory reading.

Some Japs To Be Moved From Hawaii

Will Not Be Mass Movement, However, Emmons Says.

HONOLULU, Nov. 5.—(P)—Lieutenant General Delos C. Emmons, military commander of Hawaii, said today plans were being made to evacuate some of Hawaii's 161,000 Japanese to the American mainland.

General Emmons made his announcement at a press conference. "I want to make two points clear," he said. "First, it will not be a mass movement like that on the Pacific coast and, second, it will be on a resettlement plan movement to areas where schools and employment will be available. And we don't plan to evacuate very many."

"We do not propose to interfere with the economy of the islands, but we would like to get rid of as many non-productive people as we can. The islands are overcrowded."

"Wherever possible families will go with those evacuated. We will not evacuate those connected with the war effort."

"We would like to make it on a voluntary basis."

There was no indication when the movement of the Japanese would start.

LONDON, Nov. 5.—(P)—Enjoying a respite in her strenuous round of public and semi-public calls, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt spent a quiet "off the record" day today with her chief activity a luncheon as the guest of Mrs. Winston Churchill.

She met wives of British cabinet members at the informal affair at 10 Downing street. There were no men present.

Tonight she met Anne Loughlin, British trades union leader, to discuss the part played by British women workers in the war effort.

Mrs. Roosevelt made a few personal calls today and received at her quarters three Soviet youth delegates here to study the British youth war effort after touring the United States.

They are Lieutenant Ludmilla Pavlichenko, 26, a woman sniper credited with killing 309 Germans; Lieutenant Vladimir Pchelintsey, 23, a volunteer sniper said to have killed 152 of the enemy with 154 bullets; and Nicolai Krasavchenko, 26, who organized the youth of Moscow for the successful defense of the Russian capital last year.

Kokoda Sector Ground Forces Hurl Japs Back

Allied Bombers Strike at Towns Occupied by Enemy Troops.

GENERAL MACARTHUR'S HEADQUARTERS, Australia, Friday, Nov. 6.—(P)—The Allied ground forces, which on last September 29 began hurling back the Japanese from their approach to within 32 miles of Port Moresby, are continuing their advance beyond Kokoda toward the north New Guinea coast, the high command said today. Indicating bitter fighting, the communique stated the troops were advancing slowly.

For the second straight day, Allied bombers struck at the Japanese-occupied towns of Maubisse and Aileu in Portuguese Timor, to the northwest of Australia, and at Salamaua, Jap base on the north shore of New Guinea above the port of Buna, toward which the Allied ground forces now are on the march.

Other bombers returned last night to the Buna-Faisi area in the northern Solomons where MacArthur's raiders already have sunk or damaged more than a score of ships, including an aircraft carrier. Last night's results were not observed.

Students Plan Carnival At Valdosta College
Special to THE CONSTITUTION.
VALDOSTA, Ga., Nov. 5.—Members of the senior class at the Georgia State Woman's College are busy preparing for their annual senior carnival which will be presented Saturday. The carnival is given this year as a benefit for the college war bond scholarship fund.

In furthering the war bond scholarship fund at the college, the students have adopted a plan to blot out Hirohito, Mussolini and Hitler with nickels. Large portraits of these three undesirables lay on a table in the administration building and there is strong competition between the three college dormitories to cover a face first.

Can-Can's Coming To Atlanta Kitchens, Maverick Declares

Flexible Plan Of Rationing Coffee Is Seen

WPB Says Raising Quotas Possible as Shipping Space Improves.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 5.—(AP)—Chairman Donald M. Nelson told the Inter-American Coffee Board today that the War Production Board would consider raising or eliminating the coffee ration if shipping facilities so improve that supplies are ample.

He also told the board that every effort would be made to provide more shipping space for coffee and that shipments of coffee would continue to be authorized in as great volume as cargo space permits.

Nelson's letter was in reply to one from Chairman Paul G. Daniels in which the coffee board stressed the importance of the coffee industry to the other Americas and urged maintenance of shipping facilities.

The coffee board sought assurances from Nelson on these points:

1. That rationing is solely a matter of internal distribution.

2. That rationing is not intended to curtail consumption below levels of actual and prospective imports.

3. That the intent of rationing is not to reduce imports and that shipments of coffee will continue to be authorized as cargo space permits.

4. That if shipping space improves, rationing will be raised or eliminated.

5. That every effort to provide cargo space for coffee will be made.

Nelson, in his reply, confirmed the board's understanding in every case.

Teacher's Body Found in River Near Moultrie

Truman L. Lee, Vocational Instructor, Missing Since Monday.

MOULTRIE, Ga., Nov. 5.—The body of Truman L. Lee, for the past two years vocational agriculture teacher in the Moultrie High school, was found this morning in Little river, off the Adel highway, 13 miles from Moultrie. He had been missing since Monday.

The body, when recovered, was clad only in a pair of swimming trunks.

Lee resigned from the school last week to report for active service in the Navy, having enlisted sometime ago. He left Moultrie Monday in his automobile for Fitzgerald to visit relatives and had not been seen since.

There were no marks of violence on his body indicating foul play, according to the verdict of the coroner's jury. In his car parked near the river, were found his clothing, luggage and billfold containing money and Navy ticket to Chicago, where he was to have reported to the Naval Officers' Training school at Northwestern Tuesday.

Lee was a graduate of the University of Georgia. His body has been taken to Fitzgerald for burial.

Surviving are his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Lee; sisters, Mrs. Clyde Hill, of San Diego, Cal.; Dorothy and Vivian Lee, and a brother, J. T. Lee Jr., of Fitzgerald.

had a continuous series of headaches owing to seeming indifference to its needs on the part of Mr. Maverick's subordinates in Washington in passing on applications for priorities to meet pressing requirements," Gamble said.

"It has become more and more difficult to get prompt attention, either from Atlanta or Washington, and sometimes the public welfare has been materially adversely affected and public safety threatened as a result."

Completing its planned two-day session in one day, the association elected Mayor Hugh Thurston, of Thomasville, president, and Atlanta's Mayor Hartsfield first vice president.

Comptroller B. Graham West, of Atlanta, and Zach Arnold, of Port Gaines, were re-elected treasurer and secretary.

The district vice presidents also were re-elected. They are: Spence Grayson, Savannah; J. B. Warnell, Cairo; Marshall Morton, Columbus; R. A. Drake, Griffin; A. F. Newman, Decatur; A. M. Zellner, Forsyth; W. C. Henson, Cartersville; C. C. O'Neal, Blackshear; Roy Otwell, Cumming, and E. L. Almond Jr., Monroe.

W. L. Ritchie, of Milledgeville; A. L. Tidwell, of Quitman; W. W. Brooks, of Camilla, and I. H. Davis, of Manchester, were named on the directorate.

Under the gavel of President Charles L. Bowden, mayor of Macon, the league opened sessions in the Ansley hotel yesterday morning.

Earlier, Mayor Thomas Gamble, of Savannah, had a word of criticism for delays and difficulties in receiving priorities for needed materials from Washington.

Kudzu Aids Pitts Livestock Farmer

Special to THE CONSTITUTION. ATHENS, Ga., Nov. 5.—When the permanent pasture on W. A. Stone's farm near Pitts, Ga., dried up during the late summer, Mr. Stone says he would have been unable to finish 20 head of cattle for market, without dry-lot feeding, if he hadn't had kudzu for temporary grazing.

As it was, he turned the 20 head of cattle, averaging about 500 pounds, on the kudzu for 40 days, and as a result added approximately 1,600 pounds of beef, worth $160 at present market prices.

The only thing Mr. Stone regrets is that he had only six acres of kudzu and the 20 head of cattle grazed it to the ground during the 40-day period. While this overgrazing may have damaged the kudzu somewhat, Mr. Stone expects it to recover in time, and in the future he says he is not going to be caught short on kudzu.

As part of a complete conservation plan which he worked out for his farm with the assistance of the Middle Western Ocmulgee River soil conservation district, he expects to plant an additional six acres of kudzu, which will be enough to furnish temporary grazing for all the cattle his 100-acre woods pasture will carry.

RETIRED ATLANTA COAL DEALER JOINS THOUSANDS WHO ENDORSE POW-O-LIN

"Best Medicine I Ever Saw," Declares Mr. Hadaway. This Praise of Herbal Preparation Wins Praise of Atlanta Men and Women Who Have Put It to Test in Their Own Stubborn Cases.

MR. H. E. HADAWAY.

Pow-o-lin is making so many staunch and lasting friends throughout Georgia, happy men and women from every walk of life who have received splendid benefits through its use, publicly endorse it. Mr. H. E. Hadaway, widely known retired coal dealer, residing at 771 Ashland avenue, N. E., Atlanta, declares:

"I give Pow-o-lin my public endorsement that others who may suffer as I did may profit by my happy experience with this splendid medicine. No matter what I ate I would suffer with indigestion, gas and bloating that would make me feel stuffy and smothered. My nerves felt jumpy, preventing needed sleep. Constipation filled my intestinal tract with offending waste that made me feel sluggish and aching all over. I had to dose with strong laxatives that upset me and made me feel weak and tremble. I ate so little I began to feel undernourished and weak, with hardly energy to do anything. I don't believe you could find a man or woman in Atlanta who felt more discouraged than I did.

"Pow-o-lin proved to be even better than recommended in my case. I am relieved of indigestion, smothery gas pressure and headaches. My nerves feel calm and I sleep better. Food tastes right and gives me strength and energy. The constipation and unnatural fatigue is relieved. Pow-o-lin gave me more relief than all the medicines I have used in 76 years."

Pow-o-lin is a surely herbal laxative preparation for the relief of distress as plagued Mr. Hadaway when due to constipation. Thousands praise it. At all Jacobs Drug Stores. $1.25 size, special 98c. By mail add 10c for postage. —(adv.)

'Gay Vienna' Now Flooded By Wounded

Number of Injured in Reich Is Great, Bern Hears.

BERN, Switzerland, Nov. 5.—(P)—Austria, whose capital once was a synonym for gaiety, is flooded with German wounded, information received by Yugoslav circles here reported tonight.

Virtually all the country's hotels, public buildings, sanatoriums, and hospitals have been requisitioned by the German army, these reports said.

This was the picture of Vienna as drawn by the Yugoslav informants: All noted hotels and many palaces have been turned into hospitals and are crowded with gravely wounded men. In the streets of the once joyful city there are only old men, women and wounded soldiers.

The city now is without police as these were said to be more urgently needed in Russia.

In the cafes wounded soldiers are served by waiters, all of whom are more than 60 years of age.

All able-bodied men in Vienna have been sent either to Russia or the occupied countries of Europe.

Travelers affirm that the number of wounded now in the Reich, a closely guarded secret, is great.

One German medical officer, according to information received by the Yugoslavs, was quoted as declaring the number of Germans who died on the Russian front last winter as a result of cold and disease had reached 1,000,000.

Workers who fled Germany and returned to homes in the Balkans reported there were many industries in Germany which, aside from supervisors and directors, now have not a single German workman. Foreign workers in some instances are even employed in railroad offices.

Heydrich Protege New Envoy

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—(P)—Dr. Werner Best, 39, who learned Gestapo and storm trooper methods as an elite guard deputy of the late Reinhard Heydrich, took office today as German ambassador to Denmark.

German broadcasts described him as "a typical representative of the German troop methods of the generation." It was apparent that his apprenticeship under Heydrich, the Gestapo executioner, who was killed recently by Czech patriots, might bear on his future tasks in Denmark, which has been abused by the German troop methods as its failure to co-operate fully in the Nazi's "new order" for Europe.

This little neighbor country of the Germans was occupied almost overnight in April, 1940, but has retained nominal sovereignty as it retained the Germans' purpose.

Vidalia Pastor Attends Savannah Conference

SPECIAL TO THE CONSTITUTION. VIDALIA, Ga., Nov. 5.—The Rev. M. E. Peavy, pastor of the Vidalia Methodist church, is in Savannah attending the 1942 session of the South Georgia Conference convening there today.

Rev. Peavy and the local board of stewards balanced their annual budget at a meeting held earlier in the week.

Mack Auld, chairman of the board of stewards and also a district steward of the Methodist church, is also attending the annual church meeting along with the pastor.

Scrap Campaign Cited as Proof Of Newspaper Ads' War Value

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—(P)—A report prepared for the American Newspaper Publishers' Association said today that "newspaper advertising has become a recognized and vital war weapon on the home front."

The report was issued by Frank Tripp, chairman of the ANPA bureau of advertising and general manager of the Gannett newspapers, Inc., who said newspaper advertising should demonstrate the "indispensable value of newspapers in the present crisis, as was done in the newspaper scrap drive."

Tripp said his committee had affirmed: "That not only should newspapers justify themselves with the troubled people of this country by the wonderful service they are giving, but that newspaper advertising should do likewise."

"We hope that we should justify our advertising service to the American people," Tripp said, "that we should accept duties involving our country's war projects wholeheartedly and unselfishly and that newspapers should be outdone in the war effort by no medium on earth."

"We earnestly say that as of today, newspapers can do no greater thing than this for the post-war position of an independent American press."

Clarke Executive Committee Named

SPECIAL TO THE CONSTITUTION. ATHENS, Ga., Nov. 5.—Clarke county Democrats, voting in a special election ordered by the state Democratic convention in Macon, Wednesday elected a county democratic executive committee, in addition to turning out one of the largest off-year general elections in history.

Named by the voters were former Mayors T. S. Mell and A. G. Dudley from the county at large; Reese Carnes, Allen Wier, Bryan Hopkins, E. D. Wier, and W. I. M. Cartledge, Harris Thurmond, Robert Hamilton, T. W. Morton, Pope Spratt, L. P. Crawford and W. R. Phillips, from the county militia districts. The new committee will meet soon and elect officers. Chairman of the former committee was H. J. Rowe.

Members of the new committee, running as a ticket, received more than 900 of the slightly more than 1,000 votes cast in the election.

Commander Dies As Plane Crashes

PENSACOLA, Nov. 5.—(P)—Commander Eric Lilgenantz, Medical Corps, USNR, was killed today when the plane in which he was flying crashed while on a medical research flight, public relations officers at the Pensacola Naval Air Station announced.

The pilot of the ship, Lieutenant (j.g.) Frank E. Crane Jr., USNR, of Laramie, Wyo., parachuted to the ground and received only slight injuries.

Other officers said something went wrong with the plane at 3,000 feet while it was in a test dive. Lieutenant Crane tried to communicate with Commander Lilgenantz over the plane's telephone and warn him, but could get no response, officers reported.

Commander Lilgenantz came here Tuesday from Washington to conduct research for the Bureau of Medicine and Surgery of the Navy Department.

Labor Shortage Hits Hancock Peanut Crop

SPECIAL TO THE CONSTITUTION. SPARTA, Ga., Nov. 5.—Hancock county farmers are experiencing considerable difficulty in getting their peanuts picked and marketed after being urged to plant them this year by the government. The shortage of labor and pickers is said to be the trouble, as most of the crop has been plowed up and stacked by this time, thanks to the ideal weather which has prevailed all the fall season. The crop must be hauled to markets out of the county to be sold and indications point to a much smaller acreage next year because of these difficulties.

The yield is said to be high, considering it was the first year this crop had been grown commercially in Hancock.

'PALS' at North Fulton High Elect Miss Groves President

• • • NORTH FULTON HIGH SCHOOL has a new club. The organization is comprised of freshmen girls only, and is to be known as the "PAL Club," the letters standing for Pi Alpha Lambda.

Virginia Groves, popular sub-deb daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Lee Groves, has been elected president. The attractive freshmen who will serve as her co-officers are Mary Ann Wagstaff, vice president; Jan Hays, treasurer, and Sue Oswald, secretary. In addition to the officers, there are only two members at present, these being Clara O'Keefe and Jane Steinberg, who moved here recently from Michigan.

The girls have selected from a jewelry catalogue a daintily designed sorority pin, complete with guard, and they are excitedly awaiting the arrival of the emblems before beginning their activities.

Six favored belles will be extended bids to become "PALS" at an early date. The list of prospective was begun Wednesday afternoon at a meeting held at Jan Hayes' home on Twenty-eighth street. Meetings will be held every Wednesday afternoon.

A highlight of Thanksgiving week will be the party at which the "PAL Club" will entertain, the affair to be held at Virginia's home on Rumson road. The idea for the novel freshman club was originated by Virginia, Jan and Mary Ann, and they, assisted by their sister "PALS," are planning a delightful program of entertainments to continue throughout the winter months.

• • • THOSE newlyweds, Mr. and Mrs. Willis B. Wright, are now established in their lovely new home—of brick colonial type—at 3132 North Seventeenth street in Arlington, Va. You recall that the marriage of the former Elizabeth Thompson Davidson to Bill Wright took place early in October after a whirlwind courtship.

You see, the couple first met last May, having been introduced by Thomas M. Stubbs, who is known to his intimate friends as "Mac." It so happens that he and Bill were classmates at Washington and Lee University, and when Bill came down to Atlanta on business in the late spring, it occurred to "Mac" that he and Elizabeth would find pleasure and congeniality in each other's company. At that time Elizabeth had just returned from Orlando, Fla., to take a government position here. Which she promptly exchanged for a lifetime one!

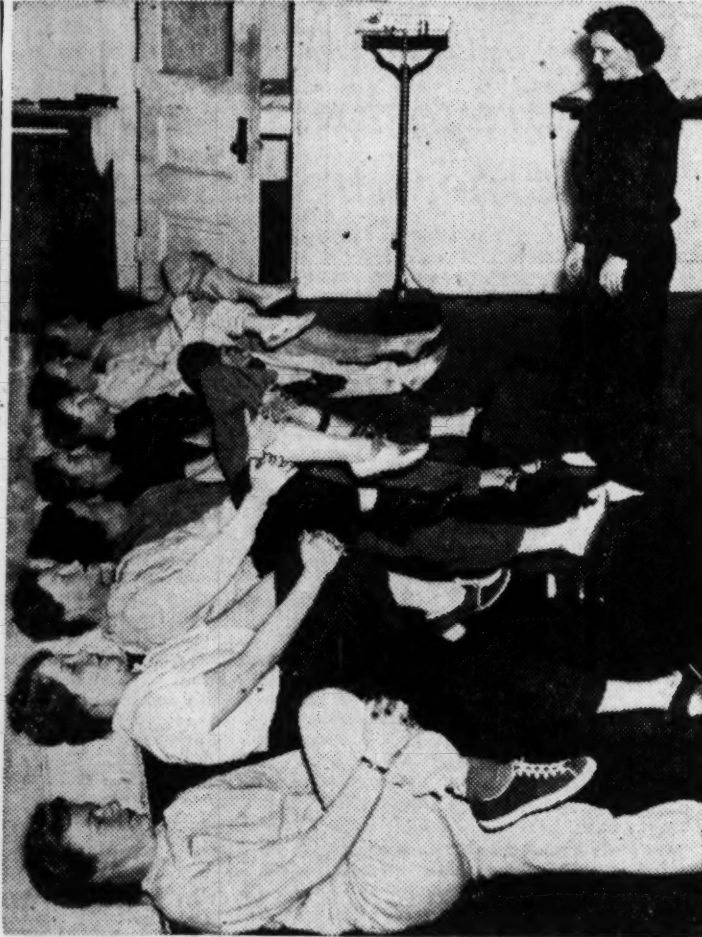

Elizabeth's sister, Mrs. Gardner H. Green, of Tarrytown, N. Y., came down for the wedding, which was quietly solemnized in the chapel of St. Mark church, with Dr. Lester Rumble officiating. Other guests from a distance were Dr. Z. Leland Green, of Mount Berry, Ga., and Robert K. Wright, of Arlington, Va.

• • • THE NOVEMBER issue of the Kiwanis Magazine, published in Chicago, carries an interesting article on "Cotton Picking Time in Georgia," by Mamie Louise Pitts.

Miss Pitts, formerly a teacher in the Atlanta public schools, is now a columnist, her stories appearing weekly on the editorial page of the Calhoun Times. This paper was awarded a cup for its editorial features at the last meeting of the Georgia Press Association.

• • • DO YOU KNOW: . . . That today is Parents' Day at Emory University, and that mothers and fathers of students will accompany them to class, be honor guests at luncheons to be held in fraternity houses—and they will wind up the day's activities by attending a banquet this evening? . . . That Julia Eby's Scotch dog is named "Smoky," and that the canine takes the place in her affections of "Jerry," the Scottie that "gave up the ghost" last summer? . . . That Roline Adair, a charming November bride-elect, has received a chest of handsome flat silver in the "Benjamin Franklin" pattern from Mr. and Mrs. John S. Clarke, her maternal grandparents? . . . That the Phi Psi will entertain at a dance for their freshman members on November 21? . . . That the O. B. X. script dance will be held on November 20 at Hurst Hall? . . . That the A. T. O.'s at Tech will entertain at their formal dance on December 4, the party to be a social highlight assembling members of the high school and college sets? . . . That Helen Taulman, president of the Debutante Club, will be interviewed today in Rich's magnolia room during the luncheon hour? . . . That Ralston Ragsdale will attend the Yale-Cornell football game played tomorrow in New Haven, Conn., and that she will be among the southern belles enjoying the weekend social festivities on the bid of a Yale man? . . . That Josephine Wilson, a sophomore at the University of Georgia, made the dean's list, the honor being conferred upon her on honor day? . . . That Thad Horton Jr., who is managing editor of the Emory Wheel, has been named in "Who's Who in American Colleges"? . . . That Dorothy Groves, who attends Bradford Junior College, has been made freshman representative in student government? . . . That Adda-vale McDougall, a 1942 graduate of the Seminary, who attends Gulf Park Seminary in Gulfport, Miss., will be among the belles attending the Tulane-Mississippi game tomorrow in New Orleans? . . . That you can buy tickets for the Debutante Club's benefit bridge party today at the door if you've not

There is nothing to "the bends" when done by career girl members of the Red Cross Motor Corps, who are taking a course in gymnastics at Daly's Health Club. Mrs. William E. Daly, standing, instructs the girls, who are, reading upward, Miss Harriette Greene, Miss Tommie Parrish, Mrs. Betty Richardson, Miss Kitty Thomson, Miss Lura Loring, Miss Lillian King, Mrs. Margaret Culler and Mrs. Virginia Frick.

Motor Corps Girls Limber Up For Arduous Duties Ahead

By KATHRYN BARNWELL.

There is a story I used to chuckle over which concerns a plump lady who, in attempting to use her new sled-like reducing machine, pulled the wrong switch and catapulted herself under the bed!

The lady provides a direct contrast to the group of career girls taking gymnastics at Daly's Health Club on Monday and Wednesday evenings, for there is literally nothing these girls can't do! If one of their number forsakes her usual bending and breathing exercises to perform on an apparatus—and the machine should fail to function properly—she would simply take it apart, and find out WHY!

The young ladies, you see, belong to the Red Cross Motor Corps, and they are as earnest as a Commando in their efforts to fit themselves physically for arduous duties with the splendid organization of their choosing.

The "Jeeps," as the girls call themselves, did not enroll for the gym course upon the suggestion of a Red Cross official. The idea was original with them. They realized that night duty, for which they have volunteered, will be easier for them if they are in good physical condition—but how already purchased them? . . . That pictures of Frances and Winthrop Gardner and Sally and Marvin McClatchey and Betty and William Holland are published in the November issue of Town and Country?

"It's gone now, teacher," she whimpers finally, while the class is convulsed with hysterical laughter.

The girls are promised longer lives and immunity from colds; they will breathe deeply. They do so, with much moaning about stomach muscles. One nearly loses her trousers while inhaling.

As the weary dynamo head for the steam baths and showers, while your reporter sags with weariness inspired by merely observing, one of them shouts, "Why don't we do some marching! I drilled once; nothing has ever done so much for my posture!"

Those girls can take it. Any human being who can bestir herself in a business office all day, subject herself then to such breathing and bending as I have just witnessed—and go home happy—is something pretty special.

The spirit of patriotism which prompted the "Jeeps" to spend their pocket money in order to fit themselves for service to their country is to be commended. Not only will they be a credit to their uniforms, but they have the satisfaction of having set a splendid example for other patriotic Americans to follow.

Parties To Honor Miss Trezevant.

MARIETTA, Ga., Nov. 5.—Miss Tilly Trezevant, whose engagement to Walter Peacock Moore, of Atlanta, was recently announced, will be honored at a number of parties prior to her wedding on November 19 at the St. James Episcopal church. Mrs. Muri Hagood will entertain at dinner on November 10 at her home on Whitlock avenue, and Mrs. W. A. DuPre entertains at a luncheon on the same date.

Mrs. Robert Fowler entertains the bridal party at a luncheon on November 15. Mrs. Morgan McNeel Jr., has planned a luncheon on November 11. Mrs. J. Ed Massey will host the bride-elect and her fiancé at a rehearsal party on November 18.

Others who will entertain are Mrs. J. M. Fowler and Mrs. Alfred Bayliss and Mrs. Jack Hodges.

Garden Center Board Meets.

The annual board meeting of the Garden Center of Atlanta will be held this morning at 10:15 o'clock in Rich's Magnolia room. The election of officers will take place and the program for the garden clubs to participate in will be discussed. Mrs. Ray J. Welsh, president of the board, will preside.

Officers' Service And Lounge Opens At Terrace Today

Officers of the Army, Navy and Marine Corps stationed in Atlanta or vicinity will benefit by the most recent hospitality gesture inaugurated by the Atlanta hospitality service committee. These officers will learn with interest of the new officers' information service and lounge to be opened today at the Georgian Terrace hotel under the management of the hospitality service committee. This lounge is located in Parlor A at the Terrace and offers a number of facilities to officers.

Opening today at 2 o'clock the officers' information service and lounge will remain open daily from 10 o'clock in the morning until 9 in the evening. Mrs. Wilmer Dutton, one of the founders of the A. H. S. C., will be the capable chairman of this new civic project, and will be assisted by a number of attractive matrons and young girls.

A variety of courtesies and conveniences will be offered to officers. The committee will be prepared to assist an officer with such things as locating a residence, receiving telephone calls or messages for him, giving information about amusements, current theater bills, sightseeing possibilities, etc. The lounge may always be used by the officers for rest, for bridge and other games, for meeting friends, or for a place to while away the time between appointments.

Any officers who are either living in Atlanta or are only passing through, and all officers of allied nations, are welcome.

Women's Meetings

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 6.

Phi Tau Omega.

The Alpha Gamma Chapter of Phi Tau Omega Sorority met recently with all members present. Miss Marion Baughn presided and the various committee chairmen made reports. Mrs. Hilda Pigott and Miss Jennie Howle will be hostesses for the November social, the time and place to be announced later.

Haley Group Meets.

The Sue B. Haley Business Woman's Group of the Atlanta Presbyterian will hold its annual fall conference this evening in the Arcade Cafeteria, Peachtree Arcade, at 6:30 o'clock.

The meeting will be presided over by Mrs. Russell McCulloch, counsellor. The speaker for the evening will be Mrs. Ben Knox.

MISS EVELYN LUCILLE LAIRD.

Miss Laird's engagement to Lieutenant Archie Reese Hooks Jr., of Fort Knox, Ky., is announced today by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. David J. Laird, of McComb, Miss. The wedding is to occur on November 7 at Fort Knox. Miss Laird has been employed for the past year in secretarial work in Washington, D. C. The bridegroom-elect is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Archie Hooks Sr., of Atlanta, and is stationed with the engineers' battalion at Fort Knox.

Atlantans Feted In Marietta Today

MARIETTA, Ga., Nov. 5.—Mrs. James Henderson and Mrs. Dugas McCleskey, of Atlanta, will be honor guests of the Laurel Garden Club at the Country Club on Friday day when they serve as hostesses to the Bridal Wreath Club, the Marietta Garden Club and the Flower Garden Club. A feature of the meeting will be tables which will feature Thanksgiving arrangements. Taking part in the decorating of tables will be Mesdames M. D. Hodges, Earl Medford, R. A. Fine and Hubert Allen for the Flower Club; Mesdames Dunklin Reynolds and W. H. Perkinson, Marietta Club; Mrs. Rosser Little, Bridal Wreath Club, and Miss Emma Katherine Anderson, Mesdames George Harrison and Lars Pierson for the Laurel Garden Club.

Misses Sara Miller, Mary Jane Ward and Anne Hawkins have returned to the University of Alabama after the weekend with relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene McNeel were hosts at a family dinner recently, honoring Mrs. Ada McNeel on her birthday.

Wife Should Ignore Her Friends' Advice About Leaving Husband

By Dixie George

Dear Dixie:

I am 32 years old and have three children, 10, 12 and eight years old. For the last several years my husband has been staying out all night and coming home drunk. I've tried to take part in civic and religious affairs for the sake of my children and husband's business. He does not appreciate it and he embarrasses me on every possible occasion. Then I've tried staying home and taking part in nothing at all. That did not work, either. He says I am ashamed of him and do not want to be seen with him. When he is not drinking he is very nice, but is easily irritated and cross with the children. However, he seldom stays sober over two days at a time.

Recently I met a man who is quite sober and who comes from a nice family. He has shown me in every way that he admires me and the children. He knows the way my husband does and he has done his best to help him. He has never urged me to leave my husband but has given me to understand that any time I do, he is willing to marry me and look after the children. For their sake I've tried to smooth things over and be as good a wife and mother as I know how, but the strain of never knowing how or when he is coming home is beginning to tell on me. My hair is turning gray too fast and my nerves are stretched to the breaking point. My husband has a small business that would keep us comfortably if he did not throw so much away on poker and whisky.

Recently I heard that he was running around with another woman, but I am not so sure of this. Bills are mounting and it seems as though I can never get them paid. I want the children to respect their father but he does things which disgust them, as young as they are. Friends have advised me to leave him but I have no money and no people.

BEWILDERED.

In the first place, turn a deaf ear to the advice of your friends. It is not that they are trying to help you, for they are and are trying to prove their friendship to you, but on the other hand, remember that they are outsiders and can, in no way, advise you about your own affairs and your husband. You and you alone can work this out.

You are indeed fortunate if this man will stand by and be ready to marry you and assume responsibility of your children. I do not doubt but what he might well be sincere in standing by, but do not bank too much on promises made while you are still the wife of another. You know, an unmarried man can make all manner of promises to the wife of another man, but when said wife is free to re-marry the unmarried man does not find her so glamorous. So be careful and do not do anything in a hurry. I can understand how you feel toward a drunken husband, but perhaps if you change your tactics things might work out better. Since he insists that you do not want to go out with him and will not go out with him, why not take a different attitude and go with him? From this statement of his I think that he means he has lost your companionship. Maybe if you would go with him and try to keep him out of mischief, he would stop drinking.

This might help, but if he is a confirmed drunkard there is nothing in the world that you can do with him. I think the best thing to do would be to center your entire time on your children and try to make up for their father's lack of paternal devotion. You will have to try to rise superior to your husband's lack of interest in you and the children. Do not let him get you down for if you do, you will be fighting a losing game. Why not take over the business yourself and make a go of it? After all if it is your support you should be willing to take over.

MY DAY: Day Nurseries In England

By Eleanor Roosevelt

LONDON, England, Wednesday.—On Monday night Mrs. Leonard Elmhurst and Ambassador Winant dined with us. I was happy my son Elliott could come up again for the night. We had a very pleasant evening and I was greatly surprised to find how late it was when I finally went off to bed. I had to sign some mail Tuesday morning before breakfast, so the papers received a rather cursory reading, for we had to leave the apartment at 9 o'clock.

Our first visit was to one of the day nurseries run by the government. Here there were about 60 children who were mostly from industrially employed. They are brought in every morning between 7:30 and 8:30 o'clock. The women have to go to work, because, in a majority of the cases, their husbands are in the services and they need the money and, incidentally, the government needs their work.

Everything is very simply but well arranged. The children are given all their meals and cared for during the entire day. The problems seem to me very much the same as at home. The only complication is the necessity of having ration books in order to obtain the food for the children. Two little twins presented me with a red, white and blue bouquet.

It seems to me the government is only gradually able to get the women to leave their children in these day nurseries. The numbers are increasing steadily, but for a time there was a great suspicion on the part of the mothers, who thought their children were going to be taken away from their influence and preferred to leave the child with a neighbor, if one could be found to care for it. Now there are no longer such neighbors. An isolation ward exists in every nursery where children having colds are kept. If any sign of a rash appears, they are sent to the contagious ward in a hospital. This obviates the necessity of keeping a child who is ill at home, except during the night period, if it is well enough to go home.

The second nursery we visited was another type conducted by the Women's Voluntary Services. For two days it accepts children who are going to be evacuated from the city to the country. They get bathed, their hair is washed, and they are outfitted with whatever clothes they need. There are also volunteers who take them to their destinations in the country by car or train. They even have a baby bus, so arranged that children are strapped in. They have a vacuum bottle of warm milk for refreshment and windows at just the right height for them to look out on their way to their destination. The children are all very good. The poor little things, I suppose so much has happened to them that nothing surprises them any more. Usually these children are placed in some private house with large gardens, where the children thrive. But I fear the complication of returning to London's slums afterwards will be great for both mother and child, for the latter will undoubtedly be very unhappy.

Your Horoscope for Today

By ALICE DENTON JENNINGS, Noted Atlanta Chirologist

What today means to you if you were born between:

March 21-April 19 (ARIES)—This is not a favorable day to begin new ventures. If you desire that they work out successfully, you will feel a greater deal of energy.

April 20-May 20 (TAURUS)—Previous to 2:40 p. m. your energy may be turned into useful channels with the expectations that your activities will be well received. At this time, deals with people of a martial temperament.

May 21-June 20 (GEMINI)—Use caution around shipping and in transportation. Irritability, hastiness and sarcasm should be held in check, and give attention to practical matters.

June 21-July 22 (CANCER)—Favorable vibrations predominate throughout the entire day. Business conditions will improve and proper, successful financial arrangements may be made. Friendships will be an asset, and you can get a better perspective on your personal duties.

July 23-Aug. 22 (LEO)—After 10:07 a. m. the day favors general finances, dealings with women and contacting superiors. Before 10:07 a. m. you may have a tendency to increase your pace to such an extent that you will feel irritable. The evening hours favors sports and romantic interests.

Aug. 23-Sept. 22 (VIRGO)—Previous to 1:14 p. m. the finances favor general business activities. Between 1:14 p. m. and 11:07 p. m. discretion should be used around domestic affairs.

MRS. L. T. COOK JR.

Mrs. Cook, prior to her recent marriage, was Miss Sarah Helen Hays, of Birmingham, Ala., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas B. Hays, of Fernbank, Ala. The ceremony was performed by Rev. John B. Dickson, pastor of the Morningside Presbyterian church, at the home of the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. T. Cook Sr., 1312 Morningside drive, where the young couple is now residing. The bride was attired in a dress of British blue trimmed with gray fur. Her accessories were sugar plum and her flowers were pink rosebuds and valley lilies. Mrs. Nesbit Curbow and Miss Sarah Adams kept the bride's book at the informal reception following the ceremony.

Woman Loses 100 Pounds On Year's Reducing Program

By Ida Jean Kain

These ladies who have 100 pounds to lose and lose it certainly make pokers out of all of you who are a mere 20 to 40 pounds overweight but who can't seem to get started with your reducing.

I like to tell you quite casually about these big-time reducers. They manage to make calorie cutting sound almost ridiculously simple. And, once you put your mind to it, all it amounts to is second-grade arithmetic. It is the law of the conservation of energy in reverse. Take fewer calories than you burn and you lose weight.

One reducer took off the entire 100 pounds in a year. That is clipping off the pounds almost too quickly. But she did it under the doctor's supervision, which made it safe for her. Her letter tells the story.

"On the 20th of this month it will be a year since I was weighed on my doctor's scales. To my humiliation, I tipped the scales at 250 pounds. I am only 5 feet 4 and I was wearing a size 46 dress. "With plenty of determination but not too much will power, I started on my program of corrective eating and exercise. It was an ordeal. I am not satisfied yet and mean to keep right on until I have accomplished what I set out to do. But I am now down to 160 pounds and I wear a size 18 dress. As you can see, I have nearly reached the 100 pounds-off mark. I am in much better health and, needless to say, I am so very much happier."

There is a woman who deserves real credit. Taking off that much weight in such a comparatively short time means having an iron will. You couldn't let down for a single meal.

Her program was just about three times as hard as yours would be. If you have 40 pounds to lose, you can coast along and lose it in a year. All you will have to do is be careful not to take an excess amount of bread and butter trim of all the fat from meat, delete the gravy and mayonnaise, and avoid fried foods and rich desserts. Those are the restrictions. You can't even call that dieting, but you subtract enough calories to average three-fourths pound off a week.

Errol Flynn's Affairs Add Grey Hairs To Warner Bros. Chiefs

By Harold Heffernan

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 5.—Behind the movie headlines:

Errol Flynn is the chief conversational topic in movieland today. Not since the days of Roscoe (Fatty) Arbuckle and his sensational affair with Virginia Rappe, which resulted in the actress' death, has the industry been so stirred by scandal involving a top male personality.

That was back in 1921, when Fatty was the leading comedian of his day. On April 13, 1922, following a series of mistrials and hung juries, Arbuckle finally was acquitted. However, he was a dead duck so far as film audiences were concerned, and never was able to do a successful comeback.

It was the Arbuckle case and the subsequent shame and ridicule heaped on the movie industry that brought Will Hays out of President Harding's cabinet to his high-salaried post as film czar and head clean-up man.

Few male stars have become entangled in odorous scandals since that time. In fact, Flynn is just about the first in those 20 years to skate off the deep edge.

Feminine stars haven't done so well, however.

Mary Miles Minter, Mabel Normand and several other leading ladies of their day were headlined in connection with the mysterious death of William Desmond Taylor, a director. This crime, incidentally, hasn't been solved to this day.

Olive Thomas, wife of Jack Pickford, died under mysterious circumstances in Europe. So did Thelma Todd, in a garage at the rear of her Santa Monica Beach home.

Mary Astor's little black diary, detailing affairs with a dozen Hollywood "name" players was a prolonged first-page sensation during Mary's contested divorce case of several years back.

Lionel Atwill, a character actor, gained court fame last year as a "wild party" giver, but all told, the leading men of Hollywood have managed, since the advent of Haysism, to keep the sheriff at a safe distance.

Whether Flynn is adjudged guilty or innocent of charges brought by minor girls, the star and his studio are almost certain to take a bad rap at the box office.

It is significant that Warner Brothers are getting Flynn's two unreleased pictures to market in the fastest possible time. His "Gentleman Jim," based on the life of James J. Corbett, heavy-weight champion in years gone by, gets its national release immediately, instead of a month hence, as originally planned. Full speed ahead has been ordered, too, for "Edge of Darkness," in which Flynn is now working with Ann Sheridan and Walter Huston.

These two films represent an investment of more than $2,000,000.

Marjorie Reynolds' dancing (with Fred Astaire as her partner) was a sensation in "Holiday Inn." She stole the movie. So, what happens? For "Dixie," her follow-up, Paramount puts Marjorie in a wheel-chair in scene No. 1 and keeps her there throughout the picture. As a paralysis victim she never gets up. Her only consolation, if you can call it that, is winning Bing Crosby at the fadout. So, the puzzle is: What is a casting director and why?

Hollywood's tiniest bond tourist, 35 pounds of Veronica Lake, checked in at Paramount Saturday after a four-week swing that took her into 15 southern cities, Detroit, New York and Washington. She will set to work immediately on "So Proudly We Hail," getting equal billing with Claudette Colbert and Paulette Goddard.

The big news about Veronica's bond-selling mission was that while she suffered from an impacted wisdom tooth and almost broke her skull in a fall, she came back to Hollywood and refused to collapse.

Brady Draws Praise From Elderly Reader

By Dr. William Brady

This is my first letter to you (writes the customer) and I have followed your column ever since it started. I am a member in good standing in the Belly Breathing Club and have been benefited thereby. I am in my 81st year—we celebrated our 60th wedding anniversary last month. Have all readers past 50 years of age can tie that record.

Our doctor has ben on digitals and thiamin chloride (vitamin B1, for some kind of heart trouble—no pain but a consciousness of heart beats).

(The doctor evidently knows his therapeutics. In this column Ol' Quack Brady now and again expresses his lack of faith in digitals and his belief that vitamin B1 (thiamin) or better still natural vitamin B complex, which includes the other essential entities as well as thiamin, really does for the heart what physicians have long tried to believe digitals does—that is, acts as a tonic, improves the tone and function of the heart muscle. For this reason it would be advisable in every instance where digitals is taken at all to combine it with a good daily ration of vitamin B complex, and, when the digitals is discontinued, to keep on supplementing the diet with a good daily ration of vitamin B complex until the cows come home.)

I am employed as a part-time accountant (continues the customer) and so far have gotten away with it. I do considerable walking and play a mean game of solitaire.

Purpose of this letter is to assure you that your efforts to preserve health are appreciated. . . . Good luck and God bless you. Sincerely yours,

Yo do not go into details about the technique of your game. I wonder whether you have a rubdown after a brisk round of solitaire. And I wonder what your girl friend does while you are furiously striving to win your game? I hope she doesn't get into mischief through idleness or want of diversion.

Seriously, brother, your letter gives me a great deal of joy. Sometimes, you know, pounding away here and getting all sorts of complaints, kicks and reproaches, it seems as though this column irritates or offends most when the sorrows who conducts it is trying his best to do people good. I reckon people don't like to be done good—they prefer to be encouraged to think that what they think they know about health is so.

MRS. EUGENE ESTES BROOKS.

Mrs. Brooks is the former Miss Jean Dennison, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Dennison, whose marriage was a recent event taking place at the little chapel of the Glenn Memorial church. Ensign and Mrs. Brooks are now residing in Norfolk, where the former is stationed with the Navy.

Miss Mary Hawes Boulineau Weds William M. Youngblood

Miss Mary Hawes Boulineau, younger daughter of George Edward Boulineau and the late Mrs. Ada Hawes Boulineau, became the lovely bride of William Manly Youngblood at a beautiful noon ceremony which took place yesterday at 12:30 o'clock at the Cathedral of Christ the King on Peachtree road. Monsignor Joseph E. Moylan read the marriage service which was witnessed by a gathering of friends and relatives of the young couple.

The Cathedral organist, Michael Erhardt, presented a musical program during the assembling of the wedding guests. The ushers were Charles E. Rodenberg, Herman A. Danzell, M. M. Albright, and Paul F. Cosgrove. Harold R. Martin was best man for Mr. Youngblood.

The beautiful young bride entered the church with her father, Mr. Boulineau, who gave her in marriage. Her maid of honor and only attendant was her sister, Miss Margaret Louise Boulineau, who was modestly gowned in aqua blue taffeta, fashioned with a fitted bodice, heart-shaped neckline, bracelet-length sleeves and a full, graceful skirt. Her brief net veil was caught to her hair by a comb and a cluster of plumes which matched the blue of her gown. She carried a fan-shaped arrangement of talisman roses.

The bride chose for the ceremony a gown of white tulle, the long torso bodice featuring a heart-shaped neckline embroidered in seed pearls, and long sleeves ending in points over the hands. The skirt extended into a long train, which was completely covered with the spray of white tulle which fell from a becoming coronet of orange blossoms and was caught at intervals with small clusters of orange blossoms. Completing the exquisite bridal ensemble was a white prayer book caught with a spray of white orchids and swansons. A note of sentiment was expressed in the dainty handmade lace handkerchief which the bride carried, and which formerly belonged to her great-grandmother, having been handed down for many generations.

Following the ceremony, the bride's father, Mr. Boulineau, was host at a wedding breakfast at the Biltmore hotel in compliment to the bride. He was assisted in entertaining by the bride's cousin and guardian, Miss Helen E. Sullivan, and the groom's mother, Mrs. A. B. Carver. Miss Sullivan was gowned in black crepe combined with French blue crepe and embroidered in pearls. Her small black hat was trimmed in a veil and her flowers were orchids. Mrs. Carver chose for her son's marriage a black crepe gown with sequin trimming, which she wore with a fuchsia hat and a shoulder spray of orchids.

Mr. Youngblood and his bride left for a wedding journey of unannounced destination. Mrs. Youngblood traveled in a smart three-piece suit of blue and brown herringbone woolen, which she wore with alligator accessories and a handsome scarf of kolinsky furs. Upon their return the couple will reside at 61 Sixteenth street.

Out-of-town guests at the wedding were Mrs. Thomas Dozier, Mrs. Lois Ghesling, and Wilson Hawes, of Thomson; Rev. and Mrs. Samuel Zealey, of Greensboro; Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Carver and Miss Theresa Davis, of Cedartown.

Barbara Lee Chafin Is Christened.

Barbara Lee Chafin, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Horace Lee Chafin, was christened recently at her home on Boulevard Granada by the Rev. Joe Threlkild. Mrs. A. W. Mays and the late Mr. Mays are the baby's maternal grandparents, and Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Chafin are the paternal grandparents.

Fifty friends of the baby's parents were present. Assisting in entertaining were Miss Doris Thompson, Mesdames W. C. Moseley, J. C. Chafin, Lehigh Crumley and A. J. Belch.

Service Club Meets.

Mrs. Leila Cottogno was hostess recently to the Service Club of Mary E. La Rocca Grove, Supreme Forest Woodmen Circle, at her home in East Point when luncheon was served. Mrs. C. W. Brock and Mrs. Sara George were luncheon guests. The sewing for the day was the making of quilt blocks. Mrs. Edna Pryor will be hostess to club members Tuesday at her home in East Point, when a quilting will be held.

For Miss Steele And Mr. Allen

Miss Betty Steele and Dean Courtney Allen, whose marriage will be a social event of today, were honored last evening by the latter's mother, Mrs. Dale Allen, who entertained at a buffet supper at her home on East Clifton road.

The affair followed the wedding rehearsal in the little chapel of the Glenn Memorial church, where the ceremony takes place today at 6:30 o'clock.

The home was decorated with quantities of flowers in autumn hues and the table was adorned with fruit and flowers to carry out a harvest theme.

Assisting the hostess in entertaining were Mrs. Leslie J. Steele, mother of the bride-elect, and Mr. and Mrs. P. C. Vickery. The guests numbered 30, among whom were Mesdames Robert Galbraith, of Chicago; Mitchell Williamson, of Birmingham; and Chester Taylor of Kansas City, Mo., who are house guests of the hostesses who are here to attend the wedding.

CAPT. AND MRS. JACK L. WRIGHT.

Captain and Mrs. Wright were married recently at the First Baptist church in Tifton. The bride is the former Miss Kathryn Webb, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Gibson Webb, of Tifton. Captain Wright is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Earl G. Wright, of Decatur, Ill., and is a flying officer stationed at Spence Field.

Program Announced Today For Art Appreciation Week

Art Appreciation Week will be observed at the High Museum of Art from November 15 to November 21, with an interesting program of events scheduled to feature the week. The series will begin with an informal tea to be held from 3 to 6 o'clock on Sunday, November 15, at the museum. Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Oliver, Mr. and Mrs. L. P. Skidmore, Mr. and Mrs. James J. Doran and Mr. and Mrs. James O'H. Sanders acting as hosts. Herbert Oliver, president of the Atlanta Art Association, will give a brief talk at 3 o'clock to explain the purpose of Art Appreciation Week and outline the program of the week.

On the following day an informal evening will be held from 8 to 10 o'clock, with officers of the Atlanta Art Association and members of the museum school staff acting as hosts. Refreshments will be served and there will be a demonstration by art students in both adult and junior groups, of all types of work.

Tuesday evening, November 17, at 8:30 o'clock there will be a lecture by Dr. Dudley Crafts Watson, of the Art Institute of Chicago, at the Piedmont Driving Club, his subject to be "American Art From Manhattan to the Grand Canyon." He will illustrate his talk with music and colored slides. Members of the winter's Debutante Club will act as ushers. Members of the Art Association will be admitted by membership card, and the public will be admitted for a charge.

A gallery tour and informal reception will be held from 8 to 10 o'clock on Wednesday evening, November 19, with the officers and trustees of the Art Association as hosts. On Thursday, November 19, the Haverly art collection at the home of Miss May Haverly, 2020 Peachtree road, will be on view from 4 to 6 o'clock. A tour will be conducted and the collection explained by L. P. Skidmore, director of the museum and the association. This visit will be open to members only. From 8 to 10 o'clock on the evening of that date, Mrs. Bates Block and the Young Matrons' Group of the Art Association will be hostesses informally, and refreshments will be served.

At 8:30 o'clock on Friday evening, November 20, there will be a demonstration at the auditorium of the Academy of Medicine by Alexander W. Brook, of New York city. Admittance will be by Art Association membership card and by special invitation. Students of the museum will act as ushers. Following the demonstration Mr. Brook will be honor guest at a reception at the High museum, with the Junior League art committee, Mrs. Francis H. Mitchell, chairman, serving as hostesses.

Plan Open House For Service Men

On Sunday afternoon the Catholic Business and Professional Women will sponsor the weekly open house at the Knights of Columbus Club. Miss Frances Larkin and Alice Bladen will be the hostesses. A musical program will be presented by Vincent Cefail, violinist, and Mr. Joseph Cerniglia, pianist. Alton P. Heck will entertain the service men with magician's tricks.

The hours for the open house will be from 4 to 9 o'clock. The young ladies on the invitation list of the war service group are invited.

Oneg Shabbath Set for Tonight.

The Pioneer Women's Organization of this city dedicated this week for an extensive membership campaign. Mrs. Eva Checkoway, of Haverhill, Mass., national representative of the office, will help the local group in its effort to gain members.

An Oneg Shabbath will be held this evening at the home of Mrs. Ida Goncher at 22 Ormond street, S. W. Mrs. Checkoway will speak.

Sunday afternoon the Pioneer Women will have a seminar on the first three "Aliyoth to Palestine" at the Jewish Educational Alliance. The public is invited.

Laura Jean Fears Feted on Birthday.

Mrs. Emory Fears entertained at her home on Melrose drive recently honoring her daughter, Laura Jean, on her sixth birthday. The Halloween motif was carried out in the decorations and refreshments. Halloween games were enjoyed by the 20 little guests on the lawn of the home.

Nurses' Conferences, Fetes To Mark Miss Beeby's Visit

Miss Nell V. Beeby, assistant editor of the American Journal of Nursing, New York city, will be honored today at the luncheon to be given jointly by Miss Llewellyn Wood, chairman of the nurses' professional registry of the fifth district, and the district at the Henry Grady hotel. The affair will precede a conference with the registry committee. This evening a dinner will be given by Miss Dana Hudson, director of nurses at Georgia Baptist hospital, following a conference with the nursing staff.

Miss Beeby is in Atlanta to work with Sister Mary Cornille, of St. Joseph's infirmary, chairman of distribution of the nursing service committee of the State Nursing Council for War Service, in order to determine how the Atlanta hospitals can maintain adequate nursing service during the present emergency. A full schedule of conferences and visits by Miss Beeby has been planned by Miss Duric Dickerson, executive secretary of the council.

This morning Miss Beeby will survey the nursing service of Emory University hospital and hold a nursing staff conference this evening at 7:30 o'clock with Miss Elizabeth McClellan, director of nurses. Saturday morning, a general group conference will be held at the headquarters of the Georgia State Nurses' Association in order to summarize Miss Beeby's findings and to make further plans to supply safe nursing service to civilian hospitals and at the same time furnish nurses to the armed forces, followed by a buffet luncheon at headquarters in honor of Miss Beeby.

Miss Beeby's schedule yesterday included luncheon at St. Joseph's Infirmary, a survey of Crawford W. Long hospital and a faculty conference with Miss Ruth Babin, director of nurses, and dinner last evening at Piedmont hospital with Miss Genevieve Gaden, director of nurses. Miss Beeby will return to New York on Saturday.

Dinner Hostesses.

Mrs. James A. Godfrey and Mrs. Ernest Roscoe Godfrey were hostesses at dinner recently at the home of the former in College Park. The house was beautifully decorated with garden flowers.

Invited were Mesdames James A. Oakley, John Warr, Hesper Martin, Ola Davis, Addie Ruth Goddard, Jewell Broadwell and Miss Cora Oakley.

All in the Game

By JACK TROY

Lucky "13" JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Nov. 5.—Thirteen is a pretty lucky number for Georgia's battling Bulldogs. The fact that they've won 13 straight games of football is only part of it.

Main thing is there are 13 players left from the famous "point a minute" 1939 freshman squad of 45. They include Costa, Keuper, Sinkwich, L. Davis, Dudish, Todd, Poschner, V. Davis, Ellenson, Pierce, Ruark, Riosky and Kuniasky.

Some were drafted, others flunked and still others quit of the original squad of freshmen. But the 13 who remain have made up for all the rest.

This team has scored on everybody; has never been beaten a second time by any team.

Florida is the only team that has a chance to beat the select 13 a second time. And the Bulldogs go into this game on Saturday with seven victories behind them in the '42 season.

Costa is unique among the select 13. He has played only four minutes and yet he has scored in every game since '39. Leo is one center who never plays but wins games. Riosky also is a center and he has stuck it out in the face of overwhelming competition.

Ask Wally Butts, the little round man, if 13 means anything to him and he'll quickly tell you if it hadn't been for these 13 boys he'd be mighty unlucky today.

Pass Catching Speaking of individual statistics, on a national scale, Georgia probably has established a new record of having three pass receivers among the first 10.

Van Davis ranks fourth in the nation. He has snagged 18 tosses for a total of 218 yards. Van's illustrious running mate, George Poschner, ranks seventh. The 16 aeriels he has caught were good for 255 yards.

And last, but by far not least, there's "Red Hoss" Lamar Davis, who's 10th nationally. Lamar has made 15 catches for a staggering total of 445 yards. Few football players in history could boast such an average. It has amounted to 29.6 yards a catch for the fast-flying Lamar.

There is another important cog in Georgia's aerial game, from the receiving side. Ken Keuper, who is among the first five in the Southeastern Conference, is an expert catcher as well as blocking back. Now and then Georgia shoots out Chief Ruark, outstanding guard, to catch a pass. Walter Maguire, another excellent blocking back, is a nifty pass receiver.

Georgia has exceptional pass patterns. And, as someone said recently, there should be completions, even on such a fancy scale as against Alabama, because they have worked on certain aeriels 20 minutes a day for three years.

Big-time coaches say it can't be done, but Georgia is one of the few teams in history that successfully sends four receivers out on pass plays. It is a tough thing to break up.

Closing In Sinkwich, the nation's leader in individual total offense, probably won't set a new national record this weekend. He needs 500 yards to eclipse Bud Schwenk's 1941 mark.

To date Flying Frankie has rushed for 480 and passed for 956 yards in 211 plays for a total yardage of 1,436. In other words, he has gone the length of a gridiron 10 and a half times, either by running or passing, in seven games.

There is some question among Florida football fans as to whether or not Coach Butts will use his ace nuch.

These fans evidently have not followed Georgia very closely.

If Coach Butts had ever shown an inclination to protect Sinkwich, the boy probably never would have had a broken jaw. For the Bulldogs had an insuperable lead against South Carolina when Frankie returned to action.

Fans need only recall, too, that it would have been a simple thing for Butts to have held Sinkwich out of the Furman game this year. Frankie had suffered a back injury against Jacksonville Naval Air Station the week before.

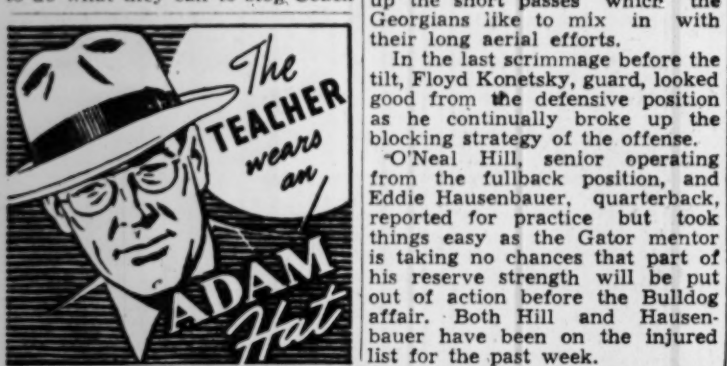

No, Sinkwich will play—and play plenty—until the end of his career. Opponents wish Butts would pamper some of his stars.

Florida Working Hard For Upset of Bulldogs

GAINESVILLE, Fla., Nov. 5.—(P)—The Gators put the finishing touches on their attack today as Coach Tom Lieb announced that rough work was over and that the remainder of the practice sessions would be devoted to light drills in preparation for the Georgia fray at Jacksonville Saturday.

The Florida head mentor voiced the deep respect that the Gators had for the entire Bulldog team, and in particular its great backfield. As can be expected, Sinkwich will be the chief worry but his understudy, Charley Trippi, also was given a vote as a triple threat to be reckoned with.

Nevertheless, classed as the underdog by a big majority, the Florida lad, are putting their hearts into their work and are out to do what they can to stop Coach

Prokop To Carry Offensive Load Against 'Cats

Improved Back Showed Class Against Duke

Injured Castleberry Not Expected To See Heavy Duty.

By JOHNNY BRADBERRY.
Eddie Prokop, Tech's sophomore passing star, has come a long way since the start of the football season and coaches are hoping he will have his best day Saturday against Kentucky.

The husky Cleveland, Ohio, boy was bothered by too much weight early in the season and was weight he couldn't work off, no matter how hard he tried. However, pounds have slowly but surely fallen off and now he is just about in top condition.

His passing has been brilliant all year but his running wasn't up to standard because of the weight handicap. However, against Duke he showed signs of regaining his old time form by running 26 yards on fourth down after failing to find a pass receiver open.

HEAVY DUTY.
Eddie will be counted on for plenty of service against the tough Wildcats. Clint Castleberry's injured shoulder may limit his playing time to a minimum which would leave the tailbacking job up to Prokop and Bobby Sheldon.

Prokop had a wisdom tooth yanked Wednesday night and wasn't feeling so good in yesterday's long practice, which included almost everything in the book. His jaw was swollen but he is expected to be in top condition by game time.

Other backfield positions are worrying Bobby Dodd, in charge of the squad during Coach Bill Alexander's illness. Pat McHugh and Davey Eldridge will handle the wingback spot because of injuries to Jim Luck and Jack Harwick. Al and Jack Faulkner may be called on to play the whole game at blocking back if Wilbur Stein and Jim Kuhn aren't sufficiently recovered from their injuries.

But on the whole, the picture was some brighter yesterday. Eight of the nine men on the injured list will make efforts to play. How long they will last is problematical but at least they will be in uniform.

KENTUCKY EDGE.
A lot of time was spent on kicking and passing as the Techs worked to offset any advantage Kentucky may have in these departments because of the return of Phil Cutchin to the lineup. Cutchin is one of the best passers and punters in the conference. Jesse Turnstill, his understudy, is not far behind and Charley Kuhn and Bob Herbert are real ball carriers.

McHugh and Jack Helms, the big end who made his punting debut against Duke last week, will handle Tech's kicking in the absence of Luck. Helms did a swell job against the Blue Devils and was keeping up the good work in practice.

The Jackets will go through a light warmup drill this afternoon.

Auburn Drills To Halt Aerials Of Ga. Navy

AUBURN, Ala., Nov. 5.—(P)—Coach Jack Meagher, who said his Auburn pass defense fell down in the loss to Mississippi State last week, spent practically the entire afternoon today in drilling the Plains boys against aerial attack.

Following the State game, Meagher promised some changes would be made before his gridders meet Georgia Naval Pre-Flight in Columbus, Ga., Saturday.

Fox Will Show Tide-Georgia Film

Pictures of the Georgia-Alabama contest will be shown at the Fox theater beginning today. Part of the Fox newsreel, the shots show Alabama's touchdown, and two of the three Georgia scores. They come on the screen for the first time at 2:47 p. m. and last two minutes.

Troy To Speak To Gator Alumni

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Nov. 5.—Jack Troy, sports editor of The Atlanta Constitution, will be principal speaker Friday night at the meeting of Florida alumni prior to Saturday's contest with bowl-bound Georgia. Jack Moore is chairman of Florida's alumni here and will be in charge of the event, which is scheduled at 8 o'clock at the Seminole hotel. All Floridians coming to the game are invited. Georgia and Florida coaches and sports writers from Atlanta and Florida newspapers have been invited to attend.

Sensational Griffin '11' Plays Decatur Tonight

Commercial-North Fulton Vie at Poncey; G.M.A. Battles Starke in Afternoon Tilt.

By HENRY DAILEY.
Atlanta fans will have a chance to see what many have branded as the "hottest high school football team in the state" tonight. The powerful, unbeaten Griffin Gold Wave, a team that has rolled up a total of 292 points in seven games against 13 for its opponents, will take on the stubborn Decatur Bulldogs at 8 o'clock on the Decatur gridiron.

It will be the first start for the Griffin eleven since it smashed the Russell Wildcats, N. G. I. C. hosts, from the ranks of the undefeated with a 23-7 licking last week. Coach Tom Moore will bring to town his ace broken field runner, Jimmy Whitmore, who has scored 14 touchdowns this season, 10 of them on runs of 50 yards or more. Two other backs, Marvin Jenkins and triple-threat Red Brisendine, are equally potent.

Another fellow who will bear watching is Captain Henry Walker, 180-pound end. Besides being a wizard on defense, Walker has booted 19 extra points in 23 tries this fall and also has a 16-yard field goal—the only one he ever tried—to his credit.

To combat this powerhouse Coach Bill Baggett, of Decatur, has rubber-armed Allen Shelton, whose brilliant passing has made the Bulldogs a top-ranking N. G. I. C. power.

Other games on the slate for today pit Starke University school, of Montgomery, Ala., against the G. M. A. Cadets at 3 o'clock this afternoon at College Park; North Fulton and Commercial in a G. I. A. A. battle at Ponce de Leon at 8 o'clock tonight, and Hapeville and Fulton in an N. G. I. C. scrap at 8 o'clock on the Russell field.

Starke, which lost to Marist here two weeks ago, will pin its hopes on triple-threat tailback Fred Gafford, brother of Monk Gafford, Auburn star. The Cadets will enter the battle somewhat crippled with two tailbacks, Dick Harris and J. K. Harrell, on the injury list. Sonny Kirven will get the starting assignment from Coach "Doc" McKay.

The fracas at Poncey will see both the Buckhead Bulldogs and the Typists seeking their first G. I. A. A. win of the campaign. Charlie McMullen, former star end, who has been shifted to tailback, has a sprained ankle and may see no action for the Fulton. Hodge will take his place. Cooley has been shifted from his tackle post to end to replace McMullen.

A buzzing battle is expected in East Point. Coach Roy Brewer's Hornets have won three and lost three, while the Redbirds have lost six in a row. Both teams are in good shape, however, and the game must be rated a toss up.

Terror Will Wrestle Morgan At City Auditorium Tonight

The only advantage the Golden Terror will have over Ben (Tiny) Morgan tonight will be a manager. The Terror's 340 pounds are not enough to give him a real edge over Morgan, who weighs 310. After a man gets to the 300 mark, weight just doesn't matter, particularly a mere 30 pounds. But the Terror has a manager. And the manager, intent on keeping his meal ticket from losing a match, which he has successfully done for 67 consecutive battles, is a real advantage. Perhaps Morgan will come up with his own manager tonight. Big Ben is faster, just as rough and apparently somewhat younger than the Terror. He was giving

Rookie of Year Crown Looms For John Pesky

Musial and Vern Stephens Chief Rivals to Boston Shortstop.

By JUDSON BAILEY.
NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—(P)—The "rookie of the year" debate in the major leagues was practically decided in favor of Shortstop Johnny Pesky of the Boston Red Sox by the voting for the most valuable players, even though it wasn't the issue at stake.

The 22-year-old freshman star, whose spectacular play enabled Joe Cronin to retire to bench managing, ranked third in the rating of the American League's most valuable men and since the best showing of a newcomer in the National League balloting was 12th by Outfielder Stan Musial of the St. Louis Cardinals, the high credit given Pesky seemed to stand for both circuits.

Pesky's debut in the big time was as bright as any rookie ever had in the league. He led the league in total hits with 205 and finished second in batting average with .331. The only regular playing a full schedule who finished above him was his slugging teammate, Ted Williams.

Cronin himself, many Boston baseball writers and presumably some of the Red Sox players, thought Pesky was more valuable to the team than Williams. He hustled all the time, made the Red Sox infield tighter than it had been for years with Cronin at shortstop and was a big reason why the Boston pitchers this season looked so much better than in the past.

With Pesky at short Boston completed 158 double plays, finishing third in the league, in contrast to 1941 when the Sox made only 139 double killings and ranked next to last.

The chief challenge to Pesky's right to be classed the outstanding rookie came from Vern Stephens, the long-hitting shortstop of the St. Louis Browns, whose surprising performance was one of the principal factors in Luke Sewell's club placing third in the American League.

In the most valuable player voting, Stephens received two bids for first place and a total of 143 points while Stephens rated one first place vote and a total of 140 points. That shows how scant an edge Pesky was given in the estimation of writers generally.

Stephens made only 169 hits and finished with a batting average of .294, but he collected 14 home runs and batted in 92 rallies compared with two roundtrippers and 51 runs driven in by Pesky. Musial, in leading the National League freshmen, batted .315, but seldom had to hit against left-handed pitching. The feat of his rookie teammate, Johnny Beasley, in winning 21 games during the regular season and twice beating the Yankees in the World Series was at least equally praiseworthy.

Marist 'B' Team Stops Mozley, 9-6

Marist B defeated Mozley Park, 9 to 6, Wednesday afternoon. Charlie Hickox scored for the Cadets on a wide end sweep from the five-yard line, and kicked the extra point to give his team the victory. A touchback added two more points. Mozley scored when Robert Greer recovered a fumble behind the goal line. Greer, Renfro, Touchstone and Payne were best for the losers. Hickox was outstanding for Marist.

Morehouse Plays Clark Saturday

Morehouse College and Clark who play at Harper's stadium Saturday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock are expected to draw 10,000 fans through the turnstiles.

It is the outstanding colored football game of the year, and it will be homecoming for Clark. Close observers of colored football here believe the game is a toss-up between the local rivals. There is perhaps more rivalry in this contest than any played here this year by colored teams. The Clark record stands out much better than that of the Morehouse aggregation.

Sinkwich Won't Get Rest Against Gators Saturday

Butts Plans To Start Ace and Play Him at Least Three Quarters; Team in Good Shape.

By JACK TROY.
Constitution Sports Editor.
JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Nov. 5.—Georgia's unbeaten Bulldogs, ranking second in the nation as an offensive team and boasting the country's leading ground gainer in Captain Frankie Sinkwich, arrived here today for Saturday's traditional gridiron tussle with the University of Florida Alligators.

From reports of scouts, the Bulldogs are going to need all their offensive guns to penetrate Florida's stubborn defensive setup. Coach Tom Lieb's club has one of the finest lines in the south.

The game is already complete sell-out and every hotel in the city is jammed to capacity with football-mad fans from northern Florida and southern Georgia. The Georgia team couldn't get downtown hotel accommodations and is staying at Ponte Vedra Beach.

Eagles Against Bulldogs Seen In Sugar Bowl

Tech, Alabama, Texas and Baylor Also Discussed by Officials.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 5.—(P)—Talk about Sugar Bowl teams, riding in on the first blasts of winter, centered mostly today around Georgia and Boston College.

The top-ranking Bulldogs and the eastern leader would be a natural in the New Year's Day classic, the Hot Stove Leaguers say, but they are not overlooking such teams as Georgia Tech, Alabama, Texas, Baylor and Tulsa.

Sugar Bowl officials are too busy with ticket sales to give early team speculation a tumble. The advance sale is progressing satisfactorily, they declare, but distant followers are worried with transportation problems. There are enough football fans near by, however, to assure a full Sugar Bowl for the ninth renewal, and that's where Boston College comes in.

The Eagles made a big hit here when they played three games in approximately a year's time—two with Tulane and one with Tennessee sandwiched in between. It was their 19-to-13 upset of highly favored Tennessee in the 1941 Sugar Bowl, some believe, that clinched Frank Leahy's job at Notre Dame. Down last year, Coach Denny Myers now has them up to fifth place in the national poll, but some tough games are ahead.

Local fans, too, would like to look over Georgia and Frankie Sinkwich who spanked Tulane, 40-0, worst losing in modern Greenlee history. Travel from Athens to New Orleans wouldn't be so hard, even in day coaches.

Georgia Tech supporters counter by claiming the Ramblin' Wreck will take care of the Orange Bowl champions for the southeastern title. They argue Tech's schedule has been the hardest. Alabama is another loop team that can't be counted on as a single loss to Georgia, because the Sugar Bowlers are free to pick at will for the best possible game.

The Southwest Conference, with three Sugar Bowl victories, has Texas and Baylor and the dark horse is undefeated Tulsa, the nation's best on statistics.

Fruit Cakes

We've been so busy and our lives so full of change it is hard to realize that another year has gone by and the holidays are not far in the future, in fact only a few short weeks away. Holidays mean fruit cakes and fruit cakes must be made early to be at their best. A fruit cake should be aged and mellowed several weeks before cutting, which means the time is growing short for Thanksgiving cakes and it's not a minute too early to make Christmas fruit cakes. There are many recipes for fruit cakes, some worked out with strict economy in mind, others designed to incorporate lots of candied fruits and nuts. Whatever recipe you choose, you should remember that much of the success of a cake of any kind depends upon the baking. All cakes and puddings which contain candied fruits should be steamed for a part of the cooking time, then baked slowly for best flavor. Steaming can easily be done with no special equipment. Simply tie waxed paper securely over pans which contain the fruit cake, then set cake pans in a pan of hot water, place cover over all and set in oven. If a cake is to be cooked three hours, steam it for at least 1 1/2 hours, then lift cake pan from hot water, remove waxed paper and bake for remaining cooking time. Bake in slow oven, 250 degrees. Following are several tested, reliable recipes to choose from in making holiday cakes.

Dark Fruit Cake (Makes 5 Pounds)
 1-4 pound candied pineapple, cut in small pieces.
 1-4 pound candied cherries, whole.
 1-4 pound seeded raisins.
 1-2 pound mixed candied lemon and orange peel.
 1-4 pound citron, sliced thin.
 1-4 pound dried apricots, sliced.
 1-4 pound dates, pitted and halved.
 1-4 pound pecan meats, broken.
 1-4 pound almonds, halved.
 3 cups flour.
 1 cup butter or margarine.
 1 cup sugar, brown or white (or 2-4 cup honey).
 1 teaspoon salt.
 1-2 teaspoon soda.
 1 teaspoon baking powder.
 1-2 cup grape juice or coffee (less 2 tablespoons if honey is substituted for sugar).
 5 eggs.
 1-2 teaspoon nutmeg.
 1-2 teaspoon cloves.
 1 teaspoon mace.
 1 teaspoon cinnamon.

Cut fruits with scissors which have been dipped in hot water. Mix prepared fruits and nuts with 1 cup of the flour, after measuring and sifting. Cream butter or margarine thoroughly, and add sugar or honey. Add eggs and mix well. Sift flour, spices, soda, salt and baking powder. Add dry ingredients alternately with grape juice or coffee to creamed mixture. Last, fold in floured fruits and nuts. Turn into pans that have been greased and lined with paper, steam and bake in slow oven.

White Fruit Cake (5 Pounds).
 3 cups sifted flour.
 1 teaspoon baking powder.
 1/4 teaspoon salt.
 1 1/2 teaspoons cinnamon.
 1 teaspoon allspice.
 1 teaspoon cloves.
 1 teaspoon nutmeg.
 1 cup butter or margarine.
 2 cups sugar (or 3 cups white syrup).
 6 eggs, well beaten.
 1/2 cup sherry or white wine (1/4 cup if syrup is substituted).
 2 cups blanched almonds, halved.
 1 1/2 cups pecan meats, broken.
 1/2 cup walnut meats, broken.
 1 package white raisins.
 1 1/2 cups citron, sliced thin.
 1 1/2 cups candied pineapple, chopped.
 1/2 cup candied orange peel, chopped.

Mix flour, baking powder, salt and spices and sift three times. Cream butter, add sugar or syrup, and beat until light and fluffy. Beat in eggs, then sherry, then flour. Last fold in fruits and nuts that have been dredged in part of the flour. Turn into greased, lined baking pans and steam and

Christmas Fruit Cake (10 Pounds.)
 4 1/2 cups sifted cake flour.
 1 teaspoon baking powder.
 1/2 teaspoon cloves.
 1/2 teaspoon cinnamon.
 1/2 teaspoon mace.
 1 pound butter or other shortening.
 1 pound brown sugar.
 10 eggs, well beaten.
 1/2 pound candied cherries.
 1/2 pound candied pineapple.
 1 pound dates, seeded and sliced.
 1 pound raisins.
 1 pound currants.
 1/2 pound citron, thinly sliced.
 1/2 pound candied orange and lemon peel.
 1/2 pound nut meats, chopped or broken.
 1 cup honey.
 1 cup molasses.
 1/2 cup cider.

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder and spices and sift together three times. Cream shortening well, add sugar gradually and cream together until light and fluffy. Add eggs, fruits and nuts lightly floured, honey, molasses and cider. Add flour gradually. Turn into pans that have been greased and lined with paper, then greased again. Steam and bake in slow oven, 250 degrees, until done. Cool in pans. For large loaves steam and bake about four hours, smaller loaves about 2 1/2 to 3 hours.

To store fruit cakes brush lightly with port or brandy, wrap in waxed paper and keep in airtight container. Cakes may be brushed with grapejuice. Whole, sound apples may be placed in box with cake, but they should be examined at intervals and replaced if they begin to decay or show signs of shriveling.

For Christmas giving cakes may be baked in small baking dishes of fancy shapes in which they may be left.

To decorate fruit cakes: When cake is almost done brush top lightly with egg white, unbeaten, and place whole fruits or nuts in fancy shapes.

Butter Fingers

Submitted by Mrs. C. A. Dobbs, 1751 Flagler Ave., N. E., Atlanta, Ga.

1 lb. butter.
 1/2 cup vanilla.
 2 teaspoons water.
 5 tablespoons sugar (confectioner's).
 2 cups flour.
 1 cup broken nut meats.

Mix together, in order named, into a stiff dough. Roll between palms into small finger shapes and bake in moderate oven. If desired, small balls may be made and the dough colored red and green by dividing into two parts. Sprinkle or roll in confectioner's sugar, if desired.

Meat Substitute

Submitted by Mrs. Carroll Cook, 2488 Piedmont Road, Atlanta, Ga.
 One cup black-eyed peas cooked in enough water just to leave them moist. (I soak peas four hours). When done put them in a casserole and spread thin slices of American cheese over the top—then half-inch slices of onion over that and brown under broiler flame. This with a green salad makes a grand inexpensive meal.

Victory Coconut Pie.

Submitted by Mrs. Marvin B. Farrar, Jenkinsburg, Ga.

4 tablespoons sugar
 2 1/2 tablespoons flour
 1 1/4 teaspoon salt
 2 cups milk
 2 egg yolks, slightly beaten
 1 cup coconut
 2 teaspoons vanilla
 1 baked 9-inch pie shell
 2 egg whites, unbeaten
 2 1/2 tablespoons sugar
 1 1/2 cup coconut

Combine sugar, flour and salt in top of double boiler, add milk and egg yolks, mixing thoroughly. Place over rapidly boiling water and cook until thick, stirring constantly. Remove from water, add 1 cup coconut and vanilla, cool slightly, then turn into pie shell. Beat egg whites until foamy throughout. Add sugar. Blend well, beat until mixture will stand in peaks. Pile lightly on filling, sprinkle with 1 1/2 cup coconut. Bake in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) 15 minutes or until golden brown.

Liver Patties.

Submitted by Mrs. Harold Reid, 265 Franklin Street, Buffalo, N. Y.

1 pound liver
 1 medium onion
 1 button garlic, if desired
 4 slices toast
 1 egg
 Pepper and salt to taste
 Put liver, onion, garlic and toast through food chopper. Add egg, salt and pepper and mix thoroughly. Drop tablespoonful into frying pan to which shortening has been added, and fry slowly, turning often so as to cook thoroughly, but not too long.

Coffee: How To Make Your Ration Go as Far as Possible

By SALLY SAVER.

At long last I've decided to speak my mind about coffee, a subject that is running like wild fire through dry grass these days. Though we acknowledge freely that we've been the richest nation on earth, enjoying for years a greater degree of luxury and abundance than any other people on this globe, we've demonstrated to ourselves and to the world by our coffee lines and our hoarding of some of us as they've watched people frantically running from store to store in search of coffee, and sending children in to buy another half-pound after they have just bought the half-pound which was their whole share out of the week's reduced shipment.

It may be that many of these people aren't really as unpatriotic as their actions would indicate; they may be thoughtless, and they may not fully understand the importance of their behavior. They may not understand the extremely close relationship of the home front and the military front and that it takes both of these to win a war. Those who run from store to store in search of more than their fair share of our limited amount of coffee surely do not have a loved one sailing the seas to get shipping through to our men in scattered parts of the world, or fighting in the islands of the South Pacific, patrolling the skies, or jumping from planes in parachutes. If they had a loved one in danger, they'd understand and they wouldn't have to be urged to take whatever sacrifices we civilians have to in the same spirit that our boys on the fighting front take them.

Perhaps a statement of the actual situation will be of help. All most of our coffee comes from South America and it used to come in ships. There is plenty of coffee down there, coffee to burn, but we can't spare the ships to get it up here. Many of our merchant ships were sunk by submarines this spring and summer and it is easy to see that while we have to send many ships to all parts of the world to keep our armies supplied and these ships have to move in well-protected convoys through sub-infested waters we cannot spare ships merely to bring coffee or any other non-essential commodity. I don't say coffee isn't desirable, I merely say it is not essential. I am one of those who like coffee better than any other drink and I think a coffee shortage troubles me as much as it does anybody. But I am saying it isn't essential that we have as much coffee as we used to have. Civilians are getting about 65 per cent of the normal supply, and if we, all of us, gave up about half of what we used to drink we'd still have enough for everybody to have some coffee.

Coffee soon will be rationed, which will settle the matter as it did the sugar situation, but in the meanwhile I'd like to see us demonstrate on coffee and on meat, which too, will be rationed, that we Americans can and will do whatever is needed on the home front.

Now, with a smaller amount of coffee available there is a problem of what to do to make it go as far as possible, and the rest of this space I want to devote to that very practical problem. Certainly you can't keep on wasting coffee in a coffee-maker that holds more than you need and in which you have to make more than you need to get it to "perk." There is about 35 to 40 tablespoons of coffee in each pound, the amount varying according to how finely the coffee is ground, and allowing 1 tablespoonful to the cup, one pound of coffee per person each five weeks will allow only 1 cup of coffee a day. If you choose to have more than 1 cup some day, then it means you won't have any some other days, and you'll have to make up your mind what you'd rather do in that case. There has been talk of grinding up roots and sweet potatoes and making some kind of brew, and Mr. La Guardia, who I am sure is a nice gentleman, but obviously doesn't know anything about cooking, says to put fresh grounds on top of old ones in the coffee pot. That doesn't suit me at all, because I'm one of those who would rather have one good cup of coffee than three poor, unsatisfactory ones. And on this basis I can give you some pointers on how to make your coffee ration give the greatest possible satisfaction.

To begin with, be sure to buy, if possible, the grind which suits your coffee-maker. The chart below tells what grind is best for each kind. Next, and this is imperative, make only what you need and measure both coffee and water with absolute accuracy. I think that drip coffee is the best kind of brew, but it may be that we'll have to return, for the duration, to boiled coffee because boiling extracts the most strength and flavor from coffee. In almost any kind of coffee maker you can have "boiled" coffee, but remember, that, like "boiled" egg, when we say boiled coffee we don't mean to boil it. Boiled coffee is only "steeped" like tea.

To Make Boiled Coffee. Measure freshly drawn water carefully and bring it quickly to a brisk boil. Then into it drop the coffee, which has been carefully measured: 1 level tablespoonful to each cup of water, allowing none for the pot, the coffee grounds tied in a little bag made for the purpose. The bag should be made large enough to allow for expansion of the grounds and to allow water to freely circulate through the grounds. Regular grind is best for boiled coffee, but drip may be used if you don't mind some cloudiness due to the fineness of the grind. When coffee is dropped into boiling water turn off heat and, leaving pot on the heated unit, allow it to steep about 5 minutes.

Chicory is a plant something like a turnip which is grown in the United States and is used in certain blends, to mix with coffee. Chicory adds body and darkness to coffee and mixed with care can be very palatable even to those who do not care particularly for chicory in coffee. Some think that chicory, unrationed, soon will be put on the market and you can then buy 1/2 pound, adding it as taste indicates, to make your coffee go at least 10 per cent further.

IDEAS FROM A COOK'S NOTEBOOK

Just before baking a plain waffle, place strips of not-too-crisp, pan-broiled bacon on top of the batter. Your waffle will come off the griddle with the bacon nesting in its crispy goodness.

Orange Coconut Pudding combines diced oranges, soft custard and shredded coconut in an appetizing manner. Peel and dice 1 large, firm orange and put into the pulp into a serving dish, sprinkling it with 2 tablespoons grated coconut. Beat 2 eggs until light and add to them 1-2 cup sugar mixed with 2 tablespoons cornstarch. Scald 2 cups milk, and when hot, pour gradually into the egg mixture. Pour back into the saucepan and stir constantly until slightly thickened and smooth. Pour hot over the oranges and let stand until cold. Sprinkle thickly with grated coconut and garnish with bits of raspberry jelly.

Fish Chowder: Cut 2 pounds haddock fillets in two-inch squares. Fry 2 slices fat salt pork until crisp, add 1 large onion sliced thin and cook slowly until the onion is a light brown. Skim out the pork, add the fish, 4 cups sliced potatoes, 1 1/2 teaspoons salt, 1 1/2 teaspoon white pepper and enough cold water to just cover the fish and potatoes. Cover and heat to the boiling point, then boil gently for 25 minutes or until the potatoes are tender. Mix 2 tablespoons butter or margarine with 2 tablespoons flour and when creamy stir into the hot chowder and add 2 cups milk. Reheat to the boiling point, sprinkle with chopped parsley and 2 large crumbled soda crackers and serve in hot soup plates.

Ham Loaf: Mix 2 cups chopped, cooked ham with 2 cups soft bread crumbs, 1 teaspoon minced onion, 2 tablespoons chopped parsley, 1-2 teaspoon grated lemon rind, 2 well-beaten eggs and 1-2 cup hot milk, or enough to make a moist mixture. Pack into buttered shallow baking dish and brush with melted butter. Bake in a moderate oven for 45 minutes or until slightly crusty on top and firm to the touch. Cut in squares for serving and serve with or without a sauce.

A pinch of grated orange rind added to the egg and milk mix for French toast adds a new note.

Hull Praises British In Egypt Campaign

WASHINGTON, Nov. 5.—(AP)—Secretary of State Hull expressed enthusiastic gratification today over the British victory in Egypt and praised Chile for the steps taken there in the past few days to smash Axis intrigue.

Asked at his press conference for comment on the British drive,

Hull said this country shared fully and enthusiastically the extreme gratification felt in London over the marvelous progress thus far achieved by British forces in their great offensive against Marshal Rommel's army.

Recently returned from the Philippines, Lieutenant Moultrie was awarded the Legion of Merit Citation.

Corporal Leonard W. Pardue, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. I. Pardue, of 421 Lee street, was recently promoted to sergeant at Camp Chaffee, Ark.

DALTON LEGION FAVORS DRAFT OF 'TEEN AGES

SPECIAL TO THE CONSTITUTION. DALTON, Ga., Nov. 5.—At the regular monthly meeting of the Dalton Post, American Legion, held this week, the members passed a resolution endorsing President Roosevelt's stand on the bill in congress calling for the registration and drafting of young men of 18 and 19 years of age. They also opposed, in the resolution, the O'Daniel amendment to the bill which requires that all these men so drafted must remain in the states for a training period of one year before they may be sent overseas.

Rob F. Hamilton, post commander, appointed Past Commander Gordon Mann to send the resolution to the house of representatives and the senate in Washington.

The Legion is sponsoring the November bond drive in Dalton in line with the state organization's drive. Committees will be appointed to push this campaign for this month.

Mrs. Jean Botts Granted Divorce

Mrs. Jean Rowe Botts, of 278 12th street, was granted a final decree of divorce yesterday in Fulton domestic relations court from Claude Seymour Botts. Mr. Botts testified that three days after she married Botts last August he was arrested on a charge of impersonating an Army officer, that he later pleaded guilty, and that he is now serving a sentence of a year and a day in the federal penitentiary.

Mrs. Botts said that she had known Botts six months before their marriage and that he had posed as a captain.

Dec. 5 Deadline Placed On Train Reservations

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—(AP)—Major eastern railroads have put a December 5 deadline on passenger service reservations pending new schedules, it was learned today as executives discussed possible far-reaching changes in service.

The suspension of reservations after December 5 was in line with the recent request of Joseph B. Eastman, head of the Office of Defense Transportation, for a general rearrangement of passenger and freight train schedules to get the best war use from all available equipment.

Hal Smith Has Important Task As New Rent Control Executive

Post Considered Vital in Nation's Battle Against Inflation.

(Editor's Note: This is one of a series of articles dealing with the men in Atlanta whose unusual wartime jobs affect the American public.)

By BETTY MATHIS.

Already holding control over about 20 per cent of the income of hundreds of thousands of southern families, Hal L. Smith, new regional OPA rent executive, soon will have jurisdiction over the amount of money every tenant in eight southeastern states pays his landlord for his home.

In addition, Smith is faced with the huge problem of rent control of business property under the President's recent anti-inflation directive.

Setting up the machinery to handle blanket rent control, which is scheduled to become effective about December 5, will be a gigantic task, Smith says, and he declares that it will take the utmost co-operation of government and citizenry alike to put the program over.

"The rent control offices will have the machinery to handle the program," the executive declared, "but the public must realize that this is a large part of the fight against inflation and be sympathetic if this thing is to work. And I believe it will work. When I was the Atlanta area rent control director, I found out that the public wants to help fight inflation."

A native of Atlanta and a graduate of Tech High school and Georgia Tech, Smith formerly was in business here as an automobile dealer. It is OPA's policy to appoint men who have been in the real estate business as regional executives. On Smith's staff, however, are experienced real estate men.

In addition to the blanket rent control which will go into effect, Smith is charged with the administration of the rent control program in 45 defense rental areas, which have already been designated.

Activities of the local directors in these areas are all guided by Smith's office, and the regional rent executive has found that he must act as a sort of shock absorber for the tenant-landlord troubles arising in the states of Virginia, the Carolinas, Georgia, Florida, Tennessee, Alabama and Mississippi.

But despite the many problems which find their way to his desk each day, the young executive is enthusiastic about his job.

"The average family pays nearly 25 per cent of its income for rent. Rent control, therefore, is one of the biggest parts of the fight against skyrocketing prices. I have a big job and an important job in the anti-inflation fight, and I intend to fight to win this battle," he declared.

Nordhouse To Explain

Aviation Cadet Program

Commander S. M. Nordhouse, officer in charge of the Naval Aviation Cadet Selection Board for Atlanta, will explain the naval aviation cadet program at the "Navy Night" meeting of the East Lake Civic Club at 8 o'clock tonight at the East Lake school auditorium.

All young men from East Lake and neighboring communities have been invited to attend, and the official Navy film on "The Battle of France" will be shown. As an added attraction, Mrs. Medora Field Perkins, well-known Atlanta author, will present "Murder on Paper."

District Court Ruling Upheld In Leach Case

Damages Sought by Mrs. King for Auto Crash Denied.

The United States circuit court of appeals has confirmed the judgment of the court of the northern district of Georgia in denying damages to Mrs. Eddie King, of 995 Carmel avenue, N. E., for injuries she received in an automobile accident near Blakely while she was the guest of Mrs. W. R. Leach, former Atlanta who now resides in Florida.

Mrs. King, 73, sued Mrs. Leach for $25,000, claiming total disability as a result of the accident in which Mrs. Leach's automobile, driven by her chauffeur, struck a bicycle on the highway, killing two boys who were riding the wheel.

After a motion for a new trial had been denied by the court here, Mrs. King appealed the case on the grounds that she was denied her constitutional rights of trial by 12 fair and impartial jurors in that one of the jurors was more than 60 years of age, in ill health and incapable of concentrating for a reasonable length of time on the issues of the case.

The appellate court also affirmed judgment of this court in the following cases: Leemon Reece and James Dewey Hipp, convicted of conspiracy to violate the internal revenue liquor laws, and William R. Hobbs, bankrupt, vs. Franklin Jewelry Company, operating in Atlanta as Schneer's, Inc., the court holding that appellant was precluded from now attacking the judgment of the lower court.

Holding that there was insufficient evidence to support the verdict, the circuit court reversed and remanded for further proceedings the district court's conviction of Frank Lee Sutton, of Cleveland, Ga., charged with possessing with others, an unregistered distillery in violation of internal revenue laws.

Hein Is Indicted

On Draft Charge

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 5.—(AP) Gottlieb Karl Hein, described by the Federal Bureau of Investigation as northern California's leading Nazi sympathizer, was indicted by the federal grand jury late yesterday on charge of violating the Selective Service act.

An FBI search was started for Hein, who disappeared from his San Francisco home two months ago.

Hein, also known as Carl Hinn and George Dreier, was charged with the "willful and felonious" failure to report for physical examination and failure to notify his draft board of a change of address. Maximum penalty on each charge is a $10,000 fine or five years' imprisonment.

Journalism Fraternity

Elects New Members

The Emory University chapter of Sigma Delta Chi, national professional journalism fraternity, elected nine new members this week—seven of them Atlantians, Dr. Raymond B. Nixon, chairman of the department of journalism, announced today.

The men were elected on the basis of academic work in the department of journalism and in liberal arts, and for promise in editorial journalism as demonstrated in work on student and professional publications.

Elected were: Alexander Brown, of Gainesville, Ga., senior; Adair Moore, of Culverton, Ga., senior; Gordon Sears and Thad Horton, of Atlanta, juniors; Paul Cox, Graham Grove, Teddy Levitt, William Sturgess, Allen Tolchard, all sophomores of Atlanta.

Work Changes Seen as Needed During War

Mrs. Dunlap Addresses Closing Meeting of Presbyterian Group.

Changes in the work of the Woman's Auxiliary of the Presbyterian church in the United States are necessary to meet war conditions at home and abroad, according to Mrs. R. F. Dunlap, chairman of the committee on woman's work of the general assembly, in her report at the closing meeting of the fall session of the group held yesterday at the Henry Grady hotel.

These changes were viewed as a challenge to send down deeper roots into the resources available in God, Mrs. Dunlap said.

In the coming year the committee will direct local church programs to aid war victims, unrooted persons, soldiers and civilians in military and industrial areas and to consider family life, child welfare, women in defense and young people.

Mrs. E. F. Horine, of Louisville, Ky., who is advisor in the Christian relations division, discussed inter-racial relations. Miss Louise Miller, former missionary to Korea, will work with the women of the Negro organizations of the church, it was announced.

2 Nazi Prisoners

And Alien Escape

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Nov. 5.—(AP)—Two German prisoners of war and an interned German alien escaped from a train near Camp Forrest, Tenn., last midnight, Federal Bureau of Investigation announced today.

The announcement was approved by Colonel Stacy Knopf, military intelligence officer of the Fourth Service Command in Atlanta.

The FBI said the three were missed at a midnight checkup on the train, which was carrying other prisoners. All had been accounted for at a check at 10 p. m.

The train had made two brief stops after leaving Nashville, the FBI said, and officers were not certain whether the men escaped during one of the halts or jumped from the moving train.

U. S. Autos Clutter Jap Streets, Why Not Tanks? Murphy Asks

BOSTON, Nov. 5.—(AP)—Associate Justice Frank Murphy, of the United States supreme court, who trained for four months with the American Army as a lieutenant colonel during the past summer, said today he was confident the United States could clutter the streets of the Japanese controlled cities of the Far East with American tanks.

The United States "is building an unbeatable Army," Justice Murphy declared at a press conference. "There are no tanks like ours. We've seen the tanks of the other countries and there is no comparison."

"We ought to be able to beat anybody in production," the former Detroit mayor commented. "When I went to the Philippines (as governor general), I visited Kobe and Yokohama (Japan) and Shanghai and Hongkong (China) and Manila, and I never saw an automobile that didn't come from my home town. I believe we can clutter those streets with American tanks, too."

"Let our people not be discouraged about production," Justice Murphy added, declaring he had seen bomber and tank factories—Henry Ford's Willow Run bomber plant, the Chrysler and Cadillac tank factories and he commented, "You ought to see them."

Explaining that as a lieutenant colonel of infantry, he had spent a month in infantry training, a month with the powerful Second Armored Division, and additional time in maneuvers in the American western desert, he declared:

"Never have I seen soldiers look so athletic. Our Army, when you see them at close range, when you sleep with them in barracks, or sleep out on the ground, when you march with them, train with them, work with them—you can't help but believe that our boys, who conquered all the nations of the world in the Olympic games, can conquer anybody when they are trained and equipped."

WHERE ARE THOSE JUNK CARS?

The War Production Board wants a record of every old car in Fulton and DeKalb counties that is no longer serving a useful purpose. If you have one yourself or know where one is located, fill in the following form, mail it to this newspaper, and WPB will see that the owner is contacted and will get the car headed for a junk yard.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 5.—(AP)—

Secretary Morgenthau said at a press conference today that details of the Treasury's borrowing program for November would be announced next week. He gave no indication as to the amount of financing necessary and declined to say which day it would be disclosed. During October the Treasury borrowed $6,800,000,000, a record sum for any one month.

GRAND OLD MAN DIES—George M. Cohan, above, in the role of President Roosevelt in "I'd Rather Be Right," played in 1937, died at his New York home early yesterday after a long illness. Composer of "Over There" and "A Grand Old Flag," Cohan played serious roles as well as comedy and he was the theater's grand old man.

Bright Broadway in Mourning For George M. Cohan Is Dead

By MARK BARRON.
NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—(P)—Broadway was a quiet street today as producers, playwrights, actors and others who frequent that noisy lane of entertainment mourned the death of one of the greatest showmen of our times. Just at daybreak, at 5 a. m., George M. Cohan died peacefully in his Fifth Avenue apartment after a serious illness that had kept him more or less incapacitated for about a year. He was 64 years old.

The son of a family act that was famous in vaudeville, Cohan, who was born at Providence, R. I., on July 4, 1878, was an actor since the age of 7. One of his first roles was in "Peck's Bad Boy." As a boy he wrote one-act plays for his family, the Four Cohans, and he also wrote songs for Lottie Gilson and Maggie Cline, two outstanding variety stars of those days.

Quiet-Spoken.
Cohan, a quiet-spoken man who always said that his office was in his hat, wrote more than 40 plays, about 100 songs and scores of vaudeville sketches. He was awarded the Congressional Medal for his "outstanding contributions to the American spirit" which included many patriotic songs, including the famous "Over There."

He was a man who was the personification of Broadway, and he never liked Hollywood although he went west a few times to make some movies. In addition to his play and song writing, he became a producer when he met Sam H. Harris, who had been interested in some amateur theatricals in Philadelphia.

Cohan and Harris met at a picnic on Staten Island and immediately became partners because Cohan said he was writing a play and Harris said he had $150,000 which he was willing to invest in a theatrical enterprise.

Horses and Plays.
Harris also owned a string of race horses which he always backed with personal bets, but the horses apparently weren't so good. Cohan speeded up his writing, but by the time he had finished his play Harris had lost both his $150,000 and the string of race horses. Nevertheless they continued to be partners with only a handshake.
